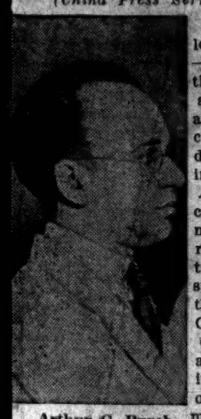
JURY UNABLE TO AGREE IN LOS ANGELES MURDER CASE

First Trial In "Obenchain" Tragedy Futile

WOMAN UP NEXT

A. C. Burch, Accused Of Shooting Rival, To Face New Jury

(China Press Service)



Arthur C. Burch

Los Angeles, Jan. 17.—One of the most sensational and spectacular murder trials in recent American crime annals, with ramifications that spread from the Pacific Coast to Chicago and including numerous prominent citizens of several cities, came to a pause today when the jury trying Arthur C. Burch for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy of Los Angeles disagreed and was discharged.

The jury was out in heated deliberation for many hours but was unable to agree on a verdict, although it is reported that a majority of the jury favored conviction. Burch's second trial was set for March 27, and District Attorney Schenck immediately plunged into the task of securing new evidence. The trial of Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, beautiful divorcee and a co-defendant, will start on February 6.

Burch, Kennedy, the murdered man, and Mrs. Obenchain form one of the most dramatic triangles with a sordid ending that has found its way into newspaper publicity. All three were school friends at Northwestern University. Burch, the son of the Rev. W. A. Burch, prominent Chicago minister, and Kennedy, the son of a Pacific Coast business man, were both madly in love with the beautiful co-ed, but she married

Ralph Obenchain, a Chicago attorney. Their marriel life proved unhappy and she secured a divorce. Later she came to Los Angeles where she expected to marry Kennedy.

The prosecution in the murder case allege that Kennedy refused to marry Mrs. Obenchain after she arrived here, and that she enlisted the aid of Burch to force Kennedy to do so.

Last summer, the prosecution alleged, Kennedy took Mrs. Obenchain to a lonely cabin in Santa Monica canyon, to look for a "good-luck penny" that Mrs. Obenchain had buried. While they were searching for the penny someone fired at them, killing Kennedy. The prosecution alleged that it was Burch, hidden in the

Currency Inflation AND Public Debt

(By Edwin R. A. Seligman, Ph. D., LL. D.—McVickar Professor of Political Economy at Columbia University. With a Preface by Alvin W. Krech, President The Equitable Trust Company of New York, and Chairman Board of Directors Equitable Eastern Banking Corporation. The preface appeared in last Sunday's China Press.)

(A REVIEW BY W. BRUCE LOCKHART)

Advance proof of an important and intensely interesting treatise by Professor Seligman have just reached Shanghai, having come to hand through the good offices of the Manager of the local branch of the Equitable Eastern Banking Corporation, whose parent institution, The Equitable Trust Company of New York owns the copyright and is responsible for its publication and circulation.

To the ordinary newspaper reader, to "the man in the street" as one is accustomed to refer to the other fellow, it may seem incongruous to apply the term "intensely interesting" to such a subject as "Currency Inflation and Public Debts."

Yet, surely, as we go about our daily affairs, are we not also occupied in one of two things, whatever else intent upon—viz., the incurring or the requital of debts?

One hazards that in this Tom Tiddlers ground of "Chits" (and Debts), almost everyone, at some time or other, is concerned with the bearing of "Currency Inflation," and all the term predicates, upon their more personal affairs, otherwise—their private indebtedness.

A step further, and whither do we arrive?

In such grave times of economic upheaval as present-day conditions, every person is directly and intimately effected—consciously or unconsciously, as usually happens in so many cases, by the question of public indebtedness.

Unfortunately, many are indifferent to the matter and, when attention is drawn to it, put it aside as of no immediate concern to themselves, possibly the concern of others—of someone else—doubtless the particular concern of those actually engaged in administering the civic or political life of the community!

To illustrate, with a homely application.

Some who see these lines may recall that the writer, in the Spring of 1921, tried to focus the attention of Shanghai newspaper readers upon the great outpouring of public resources that was (and still is, for that matter) proceeding under the aegis of Shanghai Civic Authority.

Yet the attitude of the average man was, either that it was none of his business, or, none of the writer's, but was purely the business of those who are instrumental in piling up these liabilities.

This treatise by Professor Seligman clearly indicates the essential, nay, the urgent importance, why every citizen of informed intelligence should actively concern him or herself with this matter of Public Indebtedness.

Under his tutored hand, such questions are revealed, in their civic and national perspectives, not merely as the dry bones of academic discussion: far from being so, he demonstrates them as the economic flesh and blood of every dry life—whilst by clothing them in easy and comprehensive language, his readers are enabled to note their pulsations upon personal, civic, and national affairs.

The quotations which follow amply justify the stressing of this feature of Professor Seligman's work.

"Among the problems of private and public finance there are three which have recently become of paramount importance:

"1. The growing burden of Taxation. 2. The sudden changes in price levels. 3. The instability of the currency together with the dislocation of the Foreign Exchanges."

MESSAGES SENT

Relations Between Two Countries Apparently Cordial Again

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 18.—M. Poincare and Mr. Lloyd George exchanged cordial telegrams on the occasion of the formation of the new Paris ministry, M. Poincare declaring that France would hasten to resume in the most cordial spirit the examination of Anglo-French questions, and firmly hoping that by mutual confidence they would succeed in solving these questions in the best interests of the two countries.

Mr. Lloyd George replied that the British regarded the safety of France from German aggression, the maintenance of the Treaty of Versailles and the payment of reparations to France as the common interests of the two peoples, for which the French and British must stand together.

Cannes, Jan. 16.—"Here we have been seeing History in the unmaking."

Cannes furnishes a striking example of the impossibility of governing Europe by a Supreme Council in half-secret conclave and presenting to the press only half-truths and evasions.

Blame for the recent disastrous developments is threefold: First, cheap politics in the French Chamber of Deputies; second, the French Bureau here, which has failed to present the French viewpoint clearly, missing its chance to restore the world's confidence in France; third, the skillful direction of the British Press Bureau under Lord Riddell, who got the British viewpoint over ably, but this caused the British press to gloat prematurely over their triumph, thereby rubbing the French nerves and causing the outburst in the Chamber of Deputies.

ADMIRAL LINE RESIGNS FROM FREIGHT BUREAU

Resignation of the Admiral Line from the Trans-Pacific Freight Tariff Bureau—a conference of companies engaged in freight carrying from Japan to American Pacific Coast ports—has been announced, to take effect March 1.

Blue Funnel competition is said to have been the main factor in the step, although competition from other lines had effect. It is reported that representations have been made to the Blue Funnel line to respect the rates adopted by the conference and if these negotiations result successfully, it is believed that the Admiral Line will reconsider its determination to withdraw.

Companies which are retaining their membership in the conference are the Canadian Pacific Steamships, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, the Pacific Mail, Frank Waterhouse and Co. and Struthers and Barry.

This Is A Poor Country For The Dining-Outers

By Elsie McCormick

We once asked the owner of a famous restaurant in San Francisco, who was making a pleasure tour of the Far East, for his impressions of Shanghai and Peking.

"I must confess that I was disappointed," remarked the apostle of good living. "Neither of them are dining-out cities."

This substantiates the old truism that a traveler finds what he is looking for and that the number of impressions he can store away depends on the number of compartments in his mental repository. Our restaurateur probably would have greatly appreciated the Summer Palace if there had been a beer-garden attached, and would have thoroughly enjoyed the Temple of Heaven if somebody had had the forethought to add a well-paying Italian restaurant. The absence of these features left nothing for him to do except to give critical study to the hotel menus while waiting for the next boat home.

It happened, however, that the gentleman was right. Considering the dawn-meeting propensities of the foreign population, the habit of dining in restaurants is as undeveloped as a tame canary's ability to shift for itself. The few cafes and hotels that make dinner a social event are fairly well patronised, but a city at home with as many sleep-dodgers as are to be found in Shanghai would have created fully three times as many places to trade hats with other people and complain about the service.

DINING OUT A RITE

In San Francisco, for instance, dining-out is a religious rite observed at least twice a week by a great majority of the population. We do not refer to the enforced diners-out, who are driven to it by the landlady's prejudice against cooking over the gas-jet or trying to fry eggs on the reverse side of an electric iron. In every large city one finds a race of attenuated spinsters and long-drawn-out clerks from the lower ranks of the white-collar brigade who hunch themselves cheerlessly over evening newspapers and daily editions of liver and bacon. In passing, we might mention that one observes few of this class in Shanghai, for the spinsters have all cut a foot off each end of their dresses and ten years off their age, and the lower ranks of the white-collar category live in boarding-houses and disguise themselves in dinner coats.

The real diner-out at home is the person who could dine in his own house if he chose, but who prefers food cooked in a restaurant to that bought at the delicatessen. If he lived in San Francisco, for example, he might choose to have his cocktail served in a tea-cup behind an artificial palm in the dining-room of a large hotel, or else he might seek out a little Italian restaurant clinging to the edge of Telegraph Hill as the cat does to one section of the amah's inadequate lap. In the hotel he can order the usual American version of a French dinner, which means liberal libations of salad oil, and the vivisection of all the meat into half-inch cubes. In the Italian restaurant, he can get continuous spaghetti long enough for the knitting enthusiast to wind into a ball and make into a sweater, "red ink" served in a heavy crockery cup, and hard green apples, which are kept from year to year as the dessert course and are consistently rejected by patrons. Some day somebody is going to eat one of those apples and then the restaurant in question will go bankrupt.

In San Francisco also there is a little Mexican restaurant on the brow of a hill, where gourds serve for water-bottles, strings of [illegible] from the ceiling, and toreadors despatch a bull in a series of violently-colored lithographs around the wall. Down on Columbus Avenue is the Trattoria Bologna, refuge of radicals and home-letter material for college students from upstate.

DINE AND DANCE HERE

In Shanghai, dining in one of the conventionally fashionable establishments practically always means that a dancing party is to follow. A whole family dining out together just for a lark is almost as unknown as tooth-paste advertisements on an Egyptian tomb. Probably one of the chief reasons is that Ah Ling is in the kitchen instead of mother, and despite sentimental ballads on the subject of maternal cookery most families would cast their vote in favor of Ah Ling. The fact that he doesn't make pies like mother used to make, is one of the reasons why he holds his job.

There are a few pleasantly informal dining-out places in Shanghai, such as an Italian pension when spaghetti of the clinging vine type is measured off by the yard, and where they have understudies of the same "red ink" and green apples that have been immortalised at home. They also have specimens of cheese that died but were not properly embalmed and the famous red sauce that Italy scatters with a lavish hand on everything from soup to Neapolitan ice-cream.

Then there is a German establishment entered through a butcher-shop, where you can pick your favorite cut directly from the hook. A meal there is sufficient to sustain a German regiment through a considerable siege and some of the sausages might serve as effective blackjacks besides. The first time we went there we dined enthusiastically on the various dishes in sight, and then, when we were expecting the dessert, they brought on the soup. All those who pined for sauerkraut during the war but didn't dare order it for fear of being reported to the Vigilance Committee gather there to satisfy their clandestine hunger for embalmed cabbage.

THE JAP FASHION

Though sukiyaki houses are always with us, paper walls and stockinged feet offer a combination in restraint of comfort that is not particularly tempting during the Season of the Great Cold. When Chinese New Year comes, however, and servants depart to attend at the deathbeds of all their surviving relatives, the dining-out habit in Shanghai will probably measure up to the best San Francisco standards.

WILSON NOW EXPECTED TO FIGHT FOUR POWER TREATY; MAY PREVENT SENATE RATIFICATION

Ex-President Opposes Pact, Washington Believes, And Friends Think He Will Make Public Pronouncement Against It Shortly

ATTITUDE WILL AFFECT SIX VOTES

Fourteen Democrats Now Favor Agreement, Which Gives Only Narrow Margin Of Safety; Irreconcilables Wait With Knives

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Jan. 18.—It is reliably stated that the fate of the Four-Power Pacific Pact may be decided by ex-President Wilson, who, so far, since his retirement, has refrained from interference in politics. Apparently Mr. Wilson opposes the pact on the ground that it does not constitute a minor league of nations nor tends to promote the idea, but merely constitutes another balance of power, and that the agreement is likely to result in further wars and entanglements. It is expected that Mr. Wilson will shortly make a public pronouncement, denouncing the Pact.

Democratic circles predict that Mr. Wilson's action will detach at least six of the fourteen Democrats now supporting the Treaty, and leaving only six Republicans required to defeat the Pact, the Irreconcilables, led by Senators Borah, Lafollette and Hiram Johnson, doubtless providing the necessary reinforcement.

It is understood that Mr. Hughes's open door resolution does not prohibit the acquisition of properties or rights necessary for any particular commercial, industrial or financial undertaking in China. In the second part the resolution undertakes to be guided by the principles of the open door as regards applications for economic rights or privileges and the parties agree to refer all disputes to an impartial commission.

Apart from the points mentioned earlier, the official revised text of Mr. Hughes's open door resolution follows the lines of the original declaration, binding the signatory Governments and their nationals not to seek superior rights to others. The resolution provides for the establishment of a board of reference in China, to which any disputes under the agreement may be referred for investigation.

Washington, Jan. 18.—At the meeting of the Far Eastern Committee yesterday, Mr. Hughes proposed the establishment of an international tribunal in order to consider disputes over private concessions to foreigners in China. It is reported that Great Britain and Italy supported while France opposed the proposal, which provides for the protection not only of China but the Powers from encroachments by other nationals. The Japanese supported the proposal in principle, asking for time before replying formally.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The State Department yesterday received an invitation to participate in the Economic Conference at Genoa.

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, Jan. 18.—It is reported that Dr. W. W. Yen, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has sent a wire to the Chinese delegates at the Washington Conference, instructing them that if the friendly mediation of the American and British delegations on the Shantung question fails, to present the question formally to the Conference.

It no hopes of a satisfactory settlement can be arrived at by the Conference he has instructed the delegates to withdraw from the Conference, according to the report.

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Jan. 17.—Continuing his speech in the Far Eastern Committee, Mr. Hughes added that the purpose of his government was neither to participate nor to acquiesce in any arrangement which might purport to establish favor of foreign interests or any superior rights respecting commercial or economic development in designated regions in China or which might seek to create such monopoly or preference so as to exclude other nationals from undertaking any legitimate trade or industry or participating with the Chinese Government in any category of public enterprise.

UNDERSTAFFED CONSULATES HURT BRITAIN'S TRADE

Associated Chambers Ask Higher Efficiency For Corp

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 17.—A meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Great Britain today passed a resolution urging the Government further to improve the British Consular Service in order to facilitate British trade abroad.

Sir George Renwick, M. P., in moving the resolution, declared that Britain was losing its export trad because the Consular Service was inadequate, underpaid and under-staffed.

Sir William Clark, Permament Under-Secretary for the Department of Over-Seas Trade, emphasised that much had been done during the past few years to improve the Consular Service.

Salaries had been raised, housing conditions had been improved and the salaried personnel had been increased from 358 to 515.

The Consular Service today cost over £1,000,000 as compared with £400,000 before the war. Sir William Clark said it was quite impracticable to abolish foreigners entirely owing to cost, but improvements would be made where most needed.

Fear Of Smallpox Puts Pigeons' Eggs On H.C. Of L. Roster

Ever consider the fear of smallpox as a contributing factor toward the H. C. of L. Well, a good many Chinese have discovered it to be such, and thereanent comes a crisis in the supply of a certain highly prized food item in Shanghai—pigeons' eggs.

Pigeons' eggs formerly, states the Tsun Wha Sin Pao, rated at from 3 to 4 cents apiece, small money. Now they're selling at from 6 to 7 cents, full-sized currency, and hard to get at that figure. For why? Because they're regarded by large numbers of Chinese as an extremely efficient preventive to smallpox. The journal mentioned characterizes this theory as an extremely foolish fallacy and urges its readers to aid in dispelling same. All epicures who hold that no 37-course meal is complete without the pigeons' eggs feature are also inveighing bitterly against the inoculation idea.

Stockholm Man Will Lecture On Sianfu At R.A.S. Hall Today

"Sianfu, the ancient capital of China" will be the subject of an illustrated lecture to be given in the Royal Asiatic Society's hall, 5 Museum Road, at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon by Prof. Osvald Siren, of Stockholm.

Prof. Siren is a well known fixure in the world of art, having published several works on the subject and being a regular contributor to numerous art publications.

troversy has been settled. The Committee having adopted the Chinese Tariff Agreement then proceeded with a general discussion on the policy of the open door with the object of bringing about a clearer understanding as regards the meaning of the term.

It is understood that Mr. Hughes discussed specifically the open door policy as pursued by Secretary Hay twenty years ago. It is stated that Mr. Hughes's policy contemplates the wiping out of all spheres of influence in China as one of the essentials.

The British Delegation spoke favorably on the general principles and some of the other Delegations also agreed on those principles, while the Japanese Delegation did not express any opinion.

Mr. Hughes, defining the American policy, said that the Government had never associated itself with any arrangement seeking to establish special rights or privileges in China.

EDUCATIONALISTS IN CONFERENCE HERE NEXT WEEK

The ninth meeting of the East China Christian Educational Association will take place next week in Union Church Hall, beginning Monday noon and ending Wednesday evening.

The meeting this year promises unusual interest for those concerned with education in China. In the first place the reorganisation into three sections—primary schools, middle schools, and colleges—will actually function in the preparing of the program. Thus the special interests of educational workers will be taken into consideration. In the second place the privilege of listening to addresses by educationalists of national and international reputation should bring many to the meeting. Professor Roxby, noted geographer and educator will give two addresses, while Dr. Burton, of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Russell, of the State University of Iowa, are expected to address some of the sectional meetings.

The preliminary program follows:

MONDAY SESSIONS

2:00-2:30—Opening service and preliminary business session.

2:30-3:00—President's address, subject: "The Future Development of Christian Education in East China as related to the work of the Educational Commission" by Dr. Francis J. White.

3:00-3:30—Report of the Committee on reorganisation, Rev. E. H. Cressy.

3:30-4:15—Address, subject: "A Modern Conception of Geography" by Professor P. M. Roxby, of the Education Commission.

4:15-6:00—Reception of delegates in Social room of Union Church Hall.

The evening is left open for any conferences or committee meetings that the annual meeting may demand.

TUESDAY SESSIONS

The Association will divide itself into three groups or sections in accordance with the plan of reorganisation, meeting as, A—College teachers and officers; B—Middle school principals, teachers, and other officers; C—Primary school teachers and officers.

DAIRY MEN FINED

The keeper of the Hop Sing Dairy appeared in the Mixed Court for the third time yesterday to answer to charges of adulterating milk. The adulteration, according to the Health Department, amounted to the addition of 30.6 percent of water. The dairykeeper paid a fine of $100. Another dairykeeper was assessed a like sum for putting out a brand of milk which assayed 22.4 percent too much water.

M. Krassin Pleads For Loan To Help Russia

(Rosta News Agency)

Moscow, Dec. 20.—M. Krassin, industrial representative of the Russian Soviet government, who is now in England, addressed a large gathering at Caxton Hall, London, on the Russian Famine situation. M. Krassin advocates a loan from the Western powers as the best method of fighting the present famine and preventing a recurrence of the conditions now causing hardship in Russia. The money loaned to Russia, he suggests, should be spent for machinery and supplies in the creditor nations, thus helping to solve their own unemployement problems. His speech follows:

"Measures are being taken to prepare for the cultivation of such crops as maze or millet, which are more proof against drought, and for changing the whole system of rotation of crops by introducing root crops and feeding grasses, which can secure a more stable harvest independently of climatic changes. To this are added such measures as an increase in cattle-breeding, and its introduction in those parts of the country where it was absent until now, owing to the whole of the husbandry being concentrated on the growing of grain. This is a tremendous program requiring for its realisation vast means and many years, but there is no other way. Before this work has been completed, the danger of famine cannot be regarded as wholly eliminated. The measures undertaken in order to provide public work for the population are being devised on the lines of the above scheme.

"Up till now both Russia and its Government have had to devote their utmost efforts to resisting the attack and attempts emanating from abroad and directed against the state and social order established about four years ago in Russia by its laboring masses.

STILL FIGHTING

The Russian Government, heretofore not being recognised by other Powers, although not at present engaged in any actual war, is still under the necessity of combating the hostile policy of foreign powers, and, as the experience of the last few weeks has shown, the very work of relief is being made use of for bringing pressure upon the Soviet Government.

"What would you say of a doctor who, at the death-bed of a patient, should stipulate that some fee previously due should be paid before further aid was rendered? But this is how the question of aid to Russia is being put at the moment, in the resolutions of both the Paris and Brussels Conferences. It is clear that such an attitude helps the famine and not the famine-stricken population. The first condition for a strenuous fight against famine is the cessation of such a policy of hostility and perpetual threats against Russia.

"The discontinuance of the policy of intervention, the conclusion of a formal peace, and the complete recognition of the government which the Russian people have chosen for themselves, and which they have supported during the four years of war against the world—these are the requests which we make, basing on the right of a people of a hundred millions to live and be governed in the way it prefers.

"All true friends of the Russian people, and all those who truly wish the Russian peasants to be saved from the famine and from the possibility of a recurrence, must recognise the simple justice of this request.

"The cessation of the policy of intervention and pressure on the Soviet Government would certainly greatly facilitate the fight with the famine. The countries which are industrially more developed could give Russia more direct and more practical support, with great advantages and benefit for themselves.

ADVOCATES LOAN

"The position of the masses in Western Europe and America can in no way be regarded as satisfactory. The economic crisis and unemployment are undermining the welfare of the most wealthy and cultured nations.

"The very machinery, implements, and materials which are urgently required by the Russian peasants in order to restore the starving provinces of Russia to their position as the granary of Europe, are lying useless in your stores and factories, owing to the absence of buyers, or can be easily manufactured in your idle workshops.

"The most simple and most expedient way out of the crisis would be to combine the work of rendering aid to Russia with measures tending to reduce the unemployment in the western countries. Of course, the Russian peasant has no means to pay now for those goods, and some form of credit would be required. Such active assistance, however by providing means of production and allowing the millions of Russian peasants to double or even to treble the harvest in an immense territory, would bear abundant fruit within the next years; and not only the interest, but sinking charges on such a loan would be easily repaid.

"The realisation of this scheme may meet with great difficulty. Such countries as England and France, which found hundreds of millions of pounds to support those armies of Kolchak and other generals that ruined the peasantry of Russia general and that of the starving provinces in particular, can find also the money required for the work of restoration.

"Every well-meaning citizen who sympathises with the millions of people there in the East doomed to death from starvation, and who at the same time is occupied with the problem of unemployment in other countries, must think over this scheme. He must spare no efforts to bring to bear the necessary pressure of public opinion upon those institutions on which it depends to put into effect speedy relief measures for the starving regions of Russia."

Municipal Staff Charges

Changes in the Municipal Staff given in extracts from the order books for the week ending Saturday, January 14, 1922, were as follows:

FUNDS NEEDED TO AID RUSSIANS CROSSING SHENSI

There is urgent need of funds for the relief of poor Russians who are continually making their way through the province of Shensi toward the coast, in which connection an appeal has been received here by the Rev. Evan Morgan from the Rev. A. G. Shorrock, of Sianfu. Mr. Shorrock writes:

"Is there any fund in Shanghai or elsewhere on which we could draw for the help of poor Russians travelling through Shensi on their way to the coast? We have had many such parties, all in a most pitiable and destitute condition, and we have been doing our best to help them, both with clothes and money. Of these two commodities the former is by now pretty well exhausted. The latter also very hard to keep on supplying yet the poor things keep coming and are likely to do so for some time to come.

"Ten days ago, there was a General through,—evidently a man in very high position formerly. He brought a party with him, including four Red Cross nurses. Today there is another General in the city, with his two daughters, and others; what are we to do with them and many others who are coming? They tell unspeakable tales of privations and horrors all the way, and some of them have been travelling for months all the way from the Caspian. Please do what you can to help us to find some means of supplying these poor sufferers with the needful for the rest of their journey to the coast."

The Rev. Evan Morgan, in presenting the appeal to the public expressed confidence in Shanghai's generosity and states that any gifts may be sent to him at North Szechuen Road.

RICE MERCHANTS AGAINST PROTEST TO LICENSE FORM

Rice shop proprietors, who went on strike last year when the Municipal licensing scheme was put into effect, have lodged a protest with the General Chamber of Commerce on account of a clause inserted in the Spring quarter licenses, according to the Chinese press.

The protest is made by the Chia Kuh Dong Rice Merchants' Guild which claims that in the recently issued licences the clause "security to be paid at an amount decided by the Council" is included, whereas no security was required previously. The Chamber of Commerce is asked to take the matter up with the Council, the Guild meanwhile returning the licenses to that body.

Gets Two-Year Term For Murder Attempt

Sentence of two years' imprisonment was passed by the Mixed Court yesterday upon a carpenter named Tsang Nyi-zaung who was charged with the attempted murder of a girl at 276 Hankow Road on Tuesday and with attempting also to burn down the house.

The girl stated that she awakened to find the accused holding a hand over her mouth and that he then slashed at her throat with a dagger. When she screamed employes of the lodging house came but were unable to enter the room as the door was locked. Tsang then fired the bed and the lodging house employes broke through the wall, captured him when he tried to escape and extinguished the blaze.

The accused admitted attacking the girl, stating that he had known her previously in Yangchow and that she had run away with property belonging to him. He denied the arson charge.

Senator McCormick Criticises French

(Public Ledger-Trans-Pacific—Exclusive To The China Press)

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois today announced that he will introduce a resolution in the Senate linking the question of Allied indebtedness to America with the cost of European land armaments, regarding which matter the State department is now collecting data.

"How can we help Europe until she is prepared politically and economically to put her house in order?" Senator McCormick asks. "Candor compels the statement that just as the French policy has progressively isolated France from the European Allies during the past fourteen months, so has the French policy startled a disillusioned American public during the past few weeks."

undergrowth, who fired the shots, and wound a rope of circumstantial evidence around him in an attempt to send him to the gallows.

Mrs. Obenchain, at the time of the murder, rushed to the police with a story that two roughly dressed men had killed Kennedy. The defense contended that her story was true and attempted to prove an alibi for Burch.

Ralph Obenchain, divorced husband of the women in the triangle, rushed from Chicago to Los Angeles to her defense, and both Chicago and Los Angeles, where all three were well known, has been intensely wrought up over the murder and trial.

LIFE INSURANCE
And THRIFT

IF you are not saving money, you are inviting disaster. If you are saving money, you are on the road to success. In either case you need life insurance.

IF the man who has failed to save could fully realize the dangerous chance he is taking, he would quickly turn to life insurance, like a ship seeking a safe port in a storm. A life insurance policy, in itself an excellent savings plan, is one of the best incentives to additional saving. It eliminates worry and thereby increases your efficiency. If you have never saved, begin now—THRIFT WEEK.

THE man who is saving money also has urgent need for life insurance. Every man should save to his fullest ability. Most men intend to and many of them do—for a while. Yet few succeed in accumulating an estate. Reverses, ill health or premature death leave many families in need. Life insurance solves this problem. It is a most valuable adjunct to any savings plan, for it makes the future secure.

SAVE, by all means, but INSURE also, for it is both saving and protection.

January 17th to 23rd inclusive, is THRIFT WEEK. Today, January 19th, is LIFE INSURANCE DAY. There is no more practical form of THRIFT than a life insurance policy in this strong, safe Company. THIS week is the time to secure it.

A request by letter or telephone will bring you full information.

LIFE INSURANCE DAY

A fundamental responsibility resting upon the head of every family is to provide for his loved ones. And this means not only provision for the present but also for the unknown though certain demands of the future.

The man who dies leaving his wife and family without Life Insurance doesn't merely die—he absconds. Start the New Year right by insuring your life. The man who procrastinates generally never does it at all. Do It Now.

tury or two, and it is only in very recent times that they figure largely in economic life . . . . . "

"Public debts are in reality nothing but anticipated taxes, and if the distribution of the holdings of the debt were exactly equal to the distribution of the weight of taxation, public debts would constitute no burden on the community: for every dollar paid by the individual in taxes would be compensated by the dollar received by him in interest."

"Unfortunately, however, this exact correlation does not exist, chiefly for the reason that taxes are derived in part from other sources than the income on property."

"The taxpayers in a community are not by any means simply the owners of government bonds."

"The consequence is that at any given time a public debt may constitute a burden on the community."

"Where the debts are relatively large, this burden assumes two forms: first, the interest and amortisation charges may require the imposition of excessive taxes which hamper industry and check enterprise, thus diminishing the social dividend."

The foregoing demonstrates the reasons why every individual in a community should take a real interest in public affairs, which in the ultimate are represented by the public debt re-acting upon him as a taxpayer.

"Secondly, the public debt may, as at present in most of the European countries, consist in part of paper money, which in its depreciated state adds perceptibly to the economic burden."

CHANGES IN PRICE LEVELS

"It is needless," the author writes, "to descant here upon the evils inherent in such changes," which are shown as the periodic, the protracted, and the sudden.

CURRENCY INSTABILITY

The differences between paper money proper and paper currency are pointed out, and the close connection between currency inflation and public debts is demonstrated by short sketches of the history of these phenomena in various countries, which form a basis for conclusions applicable to the present world situation.

THE EIGTEENTH CENTURY

"The two earliest examples of inflation are those—A., of the American Colonies between 1751 and 1764 which was one of the contributing causes of the American Revolution, and B., France, in connection with the famous Mississippi scheme of the audacious speculator, John Law, who succeeded in the second decade, in securing control of the public finances. The crash came in 1720 and France was brought to the brink of bankruptcy."

"Again during the French Revolution in 1789 the famous Assignats or paper money based on the security of the recently confiscated lands of the clergy, were brought into being."

The comment of the American historian, White, upon the situation in France which succeeded the unlimited issue of Assignats is almost as applicable to conditions today as in 1796.

"Then, too, as values became more and more uncertain, there was no longer any more motive for care or economy but every motive for immediate expenditure and present enjoyment. So came upon the nation the obliteration of the idea of thrift. Luxury, senseless and extravagant, set in, and this, too, spread as a fashion.

"The memory of this ill fated experiment was destined to preserve France for over a century from the repetition of any such scheme."

GREAT BRITAIN

The end of the Napoleonic wars in 1815 saw a five year period of deflation from 1816 to 1821 which was marked by the usual symptoms of business depression and discontent.

"The situation would have been far more unsatisfactory had it not been for the transition of the economic life to the modern factory system which was now fast proceeding in England, and augmenting the surplus of production.

Great Britain at the close of 1815 had a Public Debt of £861 millions.

In 1914 this had sunk to £661 millions, but as a consequence of the World War it amounted in 1921 to £7,831 millions.

The French Debt in 1815 was 1300 million Francs, in 1914 it was 32,579 million Francs, and in 1921 it had reached 302,303 million Francs.

Professor Seligman gives some interesting comparative tables of the Public Debts in millions of Dollars converted at pre-war normal rates.

	Millions
Pre-War 1914.
America	1,190
England	3,165
France	6,291
Germany	1,126
Japan	1,292
Post-War 1919.
America	25,322
England	37,221
France	32,322
Germany	48,552
Japan	1,289
Most recent date 1921.
America	23,977
England	37,520
France	48,205
Germany	71,007
Japan	1,397

In his summing up and conclusions the author writes:

"At the present time, only a few of the recent belligerents are dealing seriously with their public debt."

"Italy and Germany, as well as Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, have adopted the project of a capital levy, designed to wipe out a substantial part of the public debt by the collection of a large revenue from property."

"Unless all signs fail, there is little prospect of these gigantic debts being paid."

"As with the nineteenth century war debts, they are likely to remain a perpetual burden on the community, the weight of which will only be lightened by the gradual increase of wealth and prosperity."

FINAL CONCLUSION

"The final conclusion from our study," he writes, "is that just because of the interdependence of all great commercial countries in modern times, debt payment and currency reform have become international problems."

"It is not by impoverishing Germany, or preventing Poland from buying raw materials at what is to them grossly inflated prices, that any recovery is to be expected."

"No one can improve his own condition by impoverishing his customers. . . . . "

"Whether we desire it or not, we have all become parts of a stupendous world mechanism, no portion of which can cease to function without inevitably affecting the activity of the rest."

"The slogan of economic and fiscal reform must be:

"Set your own house in order, but join with your neighbours in setting the world house in order."

"To this imperious demand practical policies must be adjusted: for the sake of this economic necessity old shibboleths must be discarded and outworn political programs relegated to the dust heap."

This is indeed a book which all serious business men can ponder, and any firm securing copies and handing them round amongst their assistants would receive in their businesses the economic educational value of Professor Seligman's reasoned statements, backed up, as they are, by a profusion of statistical illustrations and tables.

In concluding this survey one would like to pay tribute to the statesmanlike prevision and imagination of Mr. Alvin W. Krech, President of The Equitable Trust Company of New York, who has utilised his resources for publishing and securing a wide distribution of this treatise. All wise bankers know the things of which it treats, but do not trouble to hand on their knowledge to the "man in the street" who needs to realise their importance for the general good of society. I feel sure that every one who reads this book will feel under obligation to Mr. Krech for his splendid imagination and foresight in putting it at their disposal. As an Englishman I venture to say "Thank you, Mr. Krech, very much."

Charges Parents Stole Husband When She Wasn't Looking

Florence Sharp Willard, once of Ziegfeld's "Follies," married in New York a year ago Alfred J. Willard, young son of a wealthy San Francisco broker, Maurice Willard. She recently obtained a warrant for friend husband in San Francisco, alleging abandonment. She says she did this to get her husband back from his parents, who have evidently taken possession of him while she wasn't looking. During the war Willard was court-martialled for an escapade alleged to include assaulting a guard and obtaining a captaincy under false pretences.

SAILORS' STRIKE AT HONGKONG NO NEARER DECISION

Shanghai Shipping Agencies Concerned Over Delays, Foresee Big Losses

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, Jan. 18.—The shipowners have offered increases of the seamen's wages on a varying scale, from a minimum of 7.5 percent for Pacific lines to a maximum of 25 percent for Chinese river steamers.

The seamen however have declined to accept this offer and have made a counter-proposal for a minimum of 17.5 and maximum of 32.5 perc. "

The deadlock continues. Over a hundred river steamers, aggregating 300,000 tons, are tied up in port.

Hongkong, Jan. 18.—As a precautionary measure, a small detachment of armed soldiers is patrolling the river steamer wharves in case of disturbances.

The strike is affecting 123 steamers, of which 55 are British, 16 Japanese and 8 American. The trains carried to Canton 2,691 passengers this morning and 2,075 this afternoon.

Aside the foregoing news dispatch, which indicates that the seamen's strike at Hongkong is no nearer settlement, only meagre reports of conditions in the southern port were received in Shanghai yesterday. Mails to and out of Shanghai already have been seriously delayed and no little anxiety is felt by commercial agencies engaged in shipping who foresee heavy losses if the dispute at Hongkong is prolonged.

A possibility is seen that Chinese seamen in Shanghai may move to support the Hongkong sailors and declare a sympathetic strike here. According to the Min Kuo Pao the sailors and firemen here held a meeting yesterday after telegrams had been received from the Seamen's Union at Hongkong. The question of calling a sympathetic strike here was discussed at the meeting, but what action was taken has not been disclosed.

TAIYO MARU ON WAY

Up to the present the only passenger liner that has been able to sail has been the T.K.K. steamer Taiyo Maru, which was held up a day at Hongkong. The Taiyo Maru is to arrive here tomorrow and sail the same day for San Francisco by way of Japanese ports and Honolulu, taking mails which were to have been dispatched on the China of the China Mail which is still held at Hongkong.

The steamer Monteagle of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services which was to have sailed from Hongkong on Monday and from Shanghai today is still held up and the date of her departure still is in doubt.

SAILINGS INTERRUPTED

Jardine, Matheson and Company received a telegram yesterday from Hongkong advising that the proposed sailing of the Hangsang which was due here tomorrow, had been cancelled. The policy of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company, owners of the vessel, will be outlined in Hongkong and Jardine, Matheson and Company, agents for the line here, will await instructions before allowing the Kwansang, scheduled to leave here on Friday, to sail.

The Indo-China company's regular sailings from both Shanghai and Hongkong will be interrupted until the strike is settled. The boats on the Hongkong run, the Hopsang, Choysang, Tungsing and Hansang, employ about 250 Chinese seamen, and the Koonsing, Kinsing and Yuensang, on the Northern run, employ about 170.

The Nagoya, of the P. and O. line, is at present at Hongkong, and is expected to leave for Shanghai today. The Kashgar of the same line is scheduled to sail for Shanghai on January 30. It is not expected that any of the P. and O. ships will be hit by the strike as they employ Lascars.

FEAR TROUBLE HERE

The Empress of Russia is expected here from Vancouver and Kobe on Saturday and leaves on Sunday for Hongkong and Manila. Some apprehension is felt that Chinese crews may desert the vessel on arrival here, or be induced to quit when they arrive at Hongkong unless the strike is settled before that time.

The B. and S. vessels held up in Hongkong as a result of the strike are the Szechuen, Sinkiang and another vessel.

The Hsinwah of the China Merchants line is reported detained in Hongkong, and the line advises that they have no immediate sailings for Hongkong.

IMMIGRATION ENVOY

(China Press Service)

"Began to think she would never get well."

Our Portrait is of Miss FLORRIE ORGAN, of 160, Clark Street, Ladywood, Birmingham, England, whose father writes:

"My daughter Florrie was suffering with a very bad head covered with Sores and Eruptions, and in fact her mother was afraid to comb her hair. She had been under several doctors, but all to no purpose, so I began to think she would never get well again and lose all her hair. As your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' cured me of Glandular Swellings in the Neck some years ago, and so averted my having to undergo an operation, I decided to give 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' a fair trial in the case of my daughter, and I am pleased to say it effected a wonderful cure in just over a fortnight."

SUFFERERS from Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Piles, Eczema, Boils, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Bronchocele, Rheumatism, Gout should realise that lotions and ointments can but give temporary relief; to be sure of complete and lasting benefit the blood must be thoroughly cleansed of the impure waste matter the root cause of such troubles. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, overcomes and expels the impurities: that is why so many remarkable recoveries stand to its credit. Pleasant to take, and free from injurious ingredients.

40,000 IN TOKIO ATTEND RITES FOR MARQUIS OKUMA

Public Ceremonies In Hibiya Park; Cortege 3 Miles Long

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Jan. 18.—Extraordinary scenes were witnessed at the lying in state of the late Marquis Okuma and it is estimated that 100,000 persons came during the three hours to pay homage at the bier, which was covered with insignias, decorations and ranks. There was constant hand-clapping and showers of copper coins were thrown into the pavilion. Such actions are limited to deities in shrines and temples and this is the first instance of their having occurred at a funeral.

The pavilion was surrounded by a forest of white-streamered, funeral sakaki bushes, which were offerings from the Imperial House and the most important bodies and individuals throughout Japan.

The catafalque was taken this morning, escorted by a detachment of the Emperor's personal mounted bodyguard, to the Gokokuji temple for interment.

Early this morning, Imperial messengers, members of the Cabinet and other dignitaries called at the house of the Okuma family to pay homage to the dead.

Memorial services are being held in various provinces.

Tokio, Jan. 17.—Marquis Okuma's funeral, which took place today in bitterly cold weather, was unique in as much as it was the first of its kind ever witnessed in Japan and was remarkable for its impressive simplicity.

The cortege, which was the largest ever seen in Japan, traversed three miles of snowy ground from the mansion of the Okuma family, in the Waseda suburb to the historic Hibiya Park where a mammoth funeral pavilion, surrounded by a mountain of flowers, had been erected.

The body was laid on a white wood Shinto catafalque, mounted on a motor chassis, and was followed by the late Marquis's family and friends in twenty-five motor cars. The Emperor paid a gracious tribute by sending a detachment of his personal bodyguard and a detachment of the Imperial Infantry Bodyguard.

Forty thousand mourners followed on foot, including 10,000 students from Waseda University, which Marquis Okuma founded.

On arrival at the funeral pavilion a simple Shinto ceremony was held and a salute of nineteen guns fired at noon. The body lay in state for three hours and enormous crowds were admitted, without distinction of rank or dress, in accordance with Marquis Okuma's lifelong principles, to pay a last tribute to the dead.

SERVICE AT TIENTSIN

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Jan. 17.—A memorial service for the late Marquis Okuma was observed at the Public Hall here this afternoon by the Japanese community. Mr. Chuang Ching-ko, ex-Chinese Acting Minister to Japan, and some other Chinese officials also attended the service.

Unemployed Foreigners Finding Haven In Shanghai Seen As Menace By Police

Increases in Shanghai's population of drifting and unemployed foreigners of various nationalities are the source of some concern to the police authorities and the subject is dealt with at some length in the December report of the department.

The report says that "the presence today in Shanghai and its suburbs of a large number of nondescript foreigners, mostly unemployed, and attracted hither by the absence of passport restrictions and the regulations connected therewith, is likely in the course of time to prove a menace to the peace and good order of the Settlement.

"The majority of these persons set foot in Shanghai without any previous arrangements to make a living except that provided through illegitimate channels, and many of them are shown by police records to have been expelled from other places in the East.

SOME EXPELLED

"Some have even previous records of expulsion from this port and leniency displayed by the Mixed Court in suspending the sentences of a few has led the others to believe that theirs also may be annulled if they can obtain backing strong enough to impress the authorities.

"It would perhaps be uncharitable to regard a sentence of expulsion as branding a man altogether as unfit for further residence in Shanghai if he should be a person striving amid new scenes to re-habilitate himself, but people of this kind have yet to appear amongst those with whom the police come into contact."

REPORT FOR MONTH

Continuing the report gives a summary of criminal activities for the month as follows:

"Murder.—The record of serious Crimes during the month includes two cases of murder, one of attempted murder and one of alleged manslaughter.

"Robbery.—During the month four cases of armed robbery and one of attempted armed robbery from dwelling houses occurred in the Settlement. Two persons arrested in connection with these cases are under remand.

"Seven persons were also arrested during the month on charges of armed robbery committed prior to Dec. 1, 1921, and are at present under remand.

"Property Stolen.—447 reports made under this heading during the month include 54 of burglary, 12 of house-breaking, 4 of godown-breaking, 3 of office-breaking and 4 of shop-breaking. In 132 cases investigation was made with successful results."

Park Lane,
February 4, 1912.

Messrs. COLLINS & ROSS,
154 Bermondsey St., London.

DEAR SIRS,

Until my last voyage to New York I dreaded sea travelling. Hitherto I had been so susceptible to sea-sickness that I could not leave my bed during the whole of the voyage. Even when travellin by train I have been obliged to lie down.

Before leaving for New York, I was persuaded to take "KIRBY'S SEA-SICK CURE" and was surprised to find that I not only avoided sea-sickness, but was entirely free from nausea of any kind. We had very rough seas during the greater part of the voyage, but I took all my meals in the saloon, and never felt better.

I shall never travel without the cure in future. You should make the remedy widely known, for it will be a boon to thousands.

Yours gratefully,
(Signed) MARY GORDON-WEST.

ALL FOR ANOTHER ANNUAL BASEBALL MEETING AND NEW CONSTITUTION FORECASTED

embers Wish To Correct Bye-laws; Bills Wants To Quit And Can't

Tuesday's annual meeting of the anghai Amateur Baseball Club s stirred up a line of gossip that omises to keep the fans, the ayers, and the officials themves occupied in ball talk until atter up" is called in the first me of the spring. Before the ing is rightly threshed out new icers may be replaced, a new eeting may be called, and the ub may be put on a new Conitution and Book of Bye-Laws at will render impossible a reurrence of the situation existing day.

The base of the difficulty lies in e bye-law written into the old nstitution, requiring that the first bject of business at an annual eeting shall be the election of n Executive Committee of five, e one receiving the greatest umber of votes to be Chairman, President; also the vague nderstanding of the membership s to whether or not the manager nd secretary of the club must be elected from the committee.

At Tuesday's meeting Herby allop, who was the unanimous hoice of the club for manager, as nominated as a committeeman, because it was understood hat the Manager must be of the elected five. Jack Smith who as considered the logical choice o succeed Honbrary Secretary and reasurer Woodrow Willson was ominated for the Committee beause it was thought that a Secreary must be of the Committee. oting members were not sure; hey voted Smith and Gallop into he committee so that they might e eligible for the Manager's and ecretary's posts.

AN UNWILLING PRESIDENT

When the vote was counted it was learned that Mr. F. P. Bills, he best ball player that has ever played for Shanghai, and an old committeeman had received the largest number of votes. He became the club's president in spite of the fact that he didn't want it. He felt that an active player could not well handle the affairs of a President. But because of the insufficient and incomplete bye-laws, he could not resign it. Gallop and Smith both were selected. Gallop then was elected Manager. And Smith will be nominated as Secretary, leaving but two real committeemen—McIntyre and Clapp.

Bills after the election and again yesterday stated that, while he was glad to serve on the committee, he felt that, as a player, he could not well occupy the presidency. He offered to resign, but found he couldn't. Gallop, the new Manager, feels that his nomination to the committee has blocked off another worthy man, and Smith the prospective Secretary feels likewise.

Should Bills consider it impossible to play and fill the presidential berth which was thrust upon him because of his popularity with the players and members, the presidential office must fall to Smith, who received the second highest number of votes as committeeman. Should he decide that he was not qualified or too much occupied as secretary and player, to fill the presidential chair, the post will fall to Mr. F. W. McIntyre, who was the club's third choice in the committee election. The refusal of men to serve as president might go through the whole Committee and the Club find itself without a leader.

REMEDIES SUGGESTED

Several remedies for the situation were suggested by members yesterday. One was that Mr. Gallop might retain his position as manager but resign as a committeeman, and permit Mr. Stova next choice to have his place, and then to select a new President in a new meeting. The Manager and the President, according to the plan, were to be rated as committeemen, thus raising the personnel of that body to seven instead of five. Many members suggested that the secretary also should be elected separately, but the opinion on this point was not so strong as for the separate selections of the President and Manager.

Another suggestion, which would seem to be the better was for the new committee to go over the old bye-laws, to re-write them, so as to insure against a recurrence of the present situation, and to cover many other shortcomings on the part of that document.

The change in the rules of most vital import would be to arrange that a President and a Manager, and possibly a Secretary Treasurer be elected before the committee is voted for, so that members may know beforehand how their choices for official positions have fared in the voting, and then to select the committee from the desirable men remaining.

Other changes in the bye-laws include provision for the post of Manager, something not covered in the present book, with definite limitations written in defining the scope of authority and privilege permitted the Captain, the Manager, and the Executive committee. The plan then calls for the calling of a second meeting of the membership, the formal selection of a President, a Manager, perhaps a Secretary Treasurer (separately), and a committee of five, to serve with the other officers as a full executive body.

Roberts, Ferrier And Barrett Each Beaten By But One Stroke

Hongkong, Jan. 18.—In an exciting finish the Shanghai Golf Club's interport players lost to Hongkong at Fanling today by a bare three points. The total scores of the first three players, the only ones which counted, were each not more than one stroke separated. The course was in excellent condition though during the morning rounds a heavy rain fell. Hongkong by its win retains the challenge cup for another year.

Major Bagnall of Hongkong made the best score—a 162, or average of 81 for the two rounds. Roberts of Shanghai was next best with 163. Roberts, Ferrier and Barrett, 162 and 169 and 170 respectively counted for Shanghai, while Bagnall 162, Buckland 168, and Stewart 169 counted for Hongkong.

Scores follow:

SHANGHAI		HONGKONG
Roberts	163	Bagnall	162
Ferrier	169	Buckland	168
Barrett	170	Stewart	169
Heath	173	Ferguson	169
Cumming	175	Smith	172

The three best Hongkong men averaged 166 per man, or 83 per round. Shanghai's best three averaged 167 per man or 83½ per round. Hongkong's five players totalled 840 for the team, or 168 to the player for an average per round per man of 84. Shanghai's team totalled 850, or 170 to the player for an average per round per man of 85.

After the match the teams were entertained at a dinner at the Hongkong Hotel, Mr. A. G. Stephen, president of the Hongkong Golf Club presiding.

Give 11 Players For Southpaw Cast-Off

One of the most peculiar baseball deals of all history was consummated recently between the St. Louis Browns and the Columbus club of the American Association, when Dave Danforth, a cast-off southpaw of Comiskey's White Sox, went to the Mound City in exchange for no less than eleven players.

The number of players involved (a mere dozen in all) was only an incidental of the deal. In exchange for their supposedly crack portsider Columbus will be getting talent from now until 1924. Pitchers Sanders, Burwell, Palmero and Loudermilk will be turned over immediately, as well as Second Baseman Gleason. In addition, three other players will be turned over next spring, two additionals in the spring of 1923 and one in 1924. Association sharps in town estimate Danforth's worth at $50,000.

Why Do Dainty Women Adore Bruisers?

Bee Palmer's Husband Wants $250,000 and the Answer to That Riddle, Which Is as Old as Delilah and as New as Kid McCoy's Ninth Wife

Champion Jack Dempsey's Latest Exclusive Photo, Posed Especially for This Page.

Bee Palmer Whose Husband Says He Was "Stung" $250,000 Worth, When She Began Buzzing Around Jack Dempsey.

THEY surrendered to it in the palmy days of Rome, and they are still capitulating before it nearly two thousand years later—lovely ladies for rough and rugged men, beauty for the beast, the dainty, the genre, the fair—for the brute.

Once it was the gladiator, striding from blood-wet arenas to the white arms of adoring princesses. To-day it is the gladiator's prototype, the prize-fighter, who is king of hearts.

"How," asks the unlucky chap of the size fourteen collar, "do they get that way? What is the charm of the cauliflower ear and the bull neck for these dainty creatures? Why do they all love fighters?"

The four wives of "Ruby Robert" Fitzsimmons might have answered that question. The eight wives of "Kid" McCoy who yielded him nine divorces, might have thrown a little light on the subject. Many a famous beauty and one immortal singer who lined rooms with pictures of "Gentleman Jim" Corbett could tell. Or a hundred others who have loved champion bruisers since the days when John L. Sullivan ruled the ring.

But, since most of these are no longer here to speak, the curious are seeking a solution of the mystery from the charmer who occupies the star role in the latest romance of the prize-ring. They are waiting to hear from Miss Bee Palmer, the shimmering shimmy queen who shook the shapeliest shoulders Broadway ever saw—and her husband. They are wondering what Miss Palmer will reply to the charge of her husband, Al Seigal, the song writer, that she forsook him for love of Champion Jack Dempsey. Dempsey denied it—but what gallant wouldn't?

Miss Palmer and Dempsey are somewhere in the west, acting on the same bill in vaudeville, traveling on the same Pullman from one town to another. She is the prima donna of Dempsey's act. He is paying her a fancy salary. It's just a business arrangement, declares Jack. But Husband Seigal, back in New York, tells a different story. If what he says is true then Bee Palmer is another illustration of the strange lure of gladiators, bull-fighters, boxers, males of the cave man strain—for women of utmost beauty and exquisiteness.

For Bee is one of these—a flower that sprang from a weed patch to blossom finally in the world's richest garden of beauty.

A few years ago, in Chicago, Bee Palmer was nobody. She had one asset—a pair of shoulders which the Venus of Milo would have been proud to own. Bee, who danced naturally like a wood nymph, learned that it isn't all in the feet. She perfected a new terpsichorean art—how to dance with the shoulders.

She was performing then in one of the cheapest and wildest cabarets "back of the yards," a dive reeking with whiskey fumes, tobacco smoke and the mingled odor of sawdust, steers' blood and unwashed humanity.

One night, when the dizzy dance halls were in brazen blast, a man muffled in a heavy ulster entered the cabaret where Bee Palmer danced. He wriggled through the throng of roisterers and took his seat at an inconspicuous table in a far corner. None recognized in the slight form the greatest beauty-picker in the world. Had they known him they surely would have wondered what mission brought Flo Ziegfeld to this garish haunt of hobos, hoodlums, thugs and wantons.

Over in his corner the stranger watched—first the dancer and then the effect of her extraordinary gyrations on the spectators. When the dance ended with a final wild shiver of the whole body he rose, and, swinging his malacca stick, made his way to the table where Bee Palmer sat, flushed and panting.

"What, may I ask, do you call your dance?" he asked.

"Oh, anything you like, old dear—shaking the shimmy, I guess!"

And so Bee Palmer brought the shimmy to Broadway. Flo Ziegfeld, who discovered her that night in a tom-tom cabaret in Chicago, lifted her to stardom in the twinkling of a spotlight.

She was "rushed" by millionaires galore, but she chose to marry Al Siegal, the song-writer and pianist. He played her accompaniments and Bee continued to draw down the ducats shimmying in the Follies, the Palais Royal and other gilded palaces.

And then—so says Husband Siegal—the magic of brawny shoulders, bull neck and knockout punch tempted Bee Palmer where some of the handsomest and most debonair Beau Brummels on Broadway had failed. Bee met Jack Dempsey, fresh from his bloody slaughter of Carpentier, idolized by the American sporting public, six champion feet of glowing physical strength.

The next thing Broadway knew Dempsey and Miss Palmer had caught a train for Chicago on the first leg of a theatrical tour, and Bee's husband, in New York, had filed a $250,000 alienation suit against the prize-fighter.

"I have sufficient grounds, and I am red hot mad," said Siegal.

"Nothing to it," declared Dempsey. "My manager simply engaged Miss Palmer as a headliner for my show. Besides, take a look at me. Do I look like a heart-breaker or a love thief?"

Jack's mirror might answer "no"—that is, if heart-breakers and love thieves are always pretty. But history, pointing to his predecessors in championship shoes, might nod its hoary head up and down; for history says that the cave man, not the Adonis, is the darling of the ladies.

History cites the case of Norman J. Selby ("Kid" McCoy), middleweight champion for many years. History chalks up the following score for the Kid in the game of hearts:

Married Lottie Piehler, milliner, in 1894; divorced in 1895.

Married Charlotte Smith, of St. Louis, in 1897; divorced the same year.

Married Mrs. Julia Woodruff, divorcee and actress, in 1897. Divorced once. Married again. Divorced the second time. Married the third time—Mrs. Woodruff each time the bride. Finally was divorced from her the third time.

Kid McCoy and His (Eighth) Wife.

Married Indianola Arnold, actress, in 1904; divorced the same year.

Married Mrs. Estelle Earle Ellis, rich widow, in 1905; divorced in 1910.

Married Mrs. Edna Valentine Hein, divorcee, in 1911; divorced in same year.

Married Dagmar Dahlgren, dancer, in May, 1920; she sued for separation a few months later.

Married for the tenth time, November, 1921.

Robert Fitzsimmons was another Lothario of the ring. He married four times.

Not even Kid McCoy with his eight wives nor Fitzsimmons with his four, however, could compare with the attraction "Gentleman Jim" Corbett had for the ladies—and still has, if there is a grain of truth in Broadway gossip, though, be it said to Corbett's credit, in his mature years he has lived up every inch to the title, "Gentleman Jim." James J. was only a bank clerk when he eloped with a school teacher, Miss Olie Blake, and made her Mrs. Corbett Number One. When he entered the prize-ring another charmer won his affections. When Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan and won the heavyweight championship, his first telegram went to Vera Stanley telling of the victory of her "Big Indian," as she called him. Later she became Mrs. Corbett, but, though she kept the title, she couldn't keep the ladies from adoring Jim.

Corbett, with his pompadour and his manner, was a light that drew the butterflies. Whenever he worked out for a battle, hundreds of them flocked to Bath Beach to see him. One of these was Marguerite Corneille, a famous singer. She went to England on the same ship with Corbett after the famous Corbett-McCoy fiasco in 1900. Mrs. Corbett entered suit for divorce, citing the statement of Miss Corneille's maid, Emilie Loronze.

"My mistress was so crazy about that man she dismissed all her other admirers, tore up their pictures and lined her room with pictures of Mr. Corbett," said the maid.

Corbett, McCoy, Fitzsimmons are but three of many heroes of the squared circle who charmed the fair sex. Practically every man who ever wore a champion's crown could have had the reputation of a Don Juan, had he so desired it.

"Another illustration of the strange lure of gladiators, bull-fighters, boxers—males of the cave-man strain—for women of utmost beauty and exquisiteness."

MOTHERS SECTION OF WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS MEETING

Address On "The Child" Given By Doctor Gray Of 'Y' National Committee

The regular meeting of the Mothers Department of the American Woman's Club was held yesterday morning at the Carlton Cafe, at 10 o'clock. Following the business session, the president introduced Dr. Gray of the National Committee of the Y. M. C. A., who addressed the meeting on "The Child—Its development in Health Conservation, Physical Efficiency and Personality through Exercise."

Dr. Gray began with a picture of the child as a composite unit, tracing its development from a single cell in which were wrapped up the heritage of ancestors, complete possibilities for living and the possibilities of a wonderful future. Then he pointed out that with the three great forces of development, division and differentiation this single cell grows into a composite unit.

For health conservation the child should have unrestricted activity for exercise for its complete development. Any restrictions such as too heavy clothing, being "tied to its mother's apron strings," etc. prevents complete development. The baby must kick, the growing child must get out and play and a full program of physical exercise should be carried on in the schools if this is to be attained. Children should be allowed whole freedom for exercise which may mean that they must be kept in the yard rather than in the parlor.

Physical efficiency depends on the muscles and nerves working together through the neuro-muscular mechanism. We walk, play, dance and run gracefully and effectively when this mechanism is properly developed. We are also better able to take care of our bodies when we have control over our nerves and muscles.

In the span of life from one to seventy years, the physical life develops first, then the mental side and finally we notice the child's personality showing at about the time when the religious desires are influencing the child. We hardly know what personality is nor can it be absolutely located in any of the tissues of the body. But we do know that the child with plenty of well-directed exercise, with nerves and muscles working together and smoothly, has a personality that is good, open and frank. That the personality is effected by activity and in turn controls activity and that properly directed activity makes it possible for the child to take its place of responsibility in society, well equipped to give of its best.

The next meeting of the department will be February 1 at 10 o'clock at the Royal Asiatic Society Hall, Museum Road, when Mrs. W. W. Peter will use the reflectoscope in discussing prenatal development.

Cabinet Position At Peking Stronger

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 18.—The political situation here is virtually unchanged but the Cabinet's situation appears to be strengthening.

According to official information, General Wu Pei-fu's attitude is moderating. In view of General Wu's record, it appears strange what small importance the Chinese place upon his threats against Premier Liang Shih-yi.

The steady withdrawal of General Chang Tso-lin's troops from the Peking-Mukden Railway Stations to Mukden is taken to indicate that General Chang does not anticipate a coup d'etat in Peking by General Wu Pei-fu.

The Cabinet announces satisfactory financial arrangements for the Chinese New Year.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 15.—A report was in circulation last night that as a result of the good offices of President Hsu's envoy to Loyang General Hsu Pan-chieh, General Wu Pei-fu is gradually adopting a more moderate attitude toward the new Cabinet.

General Wu is reported to have submitted a proposal to the Government involving the payment of one million dollars of the money promised him by the Government for military expenses before the end of the lunar year and undertaking that General Chang Hsun shall not re-enter the Government service.

DR. WANG TO C. E. R.

(Reuter Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 15.—It is understood that a mandate is to be issued shortly, appointing Dr. C. C. Wang as Associate Director of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

This appointment has been recommended by the new Director General of the Railway, Mr. Wang Nai-ping, in recognition of the services rendered by Dr. Wang during the war.

Beauty Sues Congressman Herrick For Breach Of Promise

Miss Anna Elizabeth Niebel, eighteen-year-old Washington, D. C. beauty, now living in New York, has begun suit against Representative Manuel Herrick, of Oklahoma, charging breach of promise. Miss Niebel was an entrant in a beauty contest conducted by a Washington newspaper. She charges that Herrick corresponded with and called on her. Congressman Herrick's recent introduction of a bill to regulate newspaper beauty contests disclosed that for some time he had been corresponding in affectionate terms with a number of girls in Washington whose photographs had been entered in the beauty contest. Miss Niebel's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Niebel, was appointed guardian for the plaintiff pending trial of the action.

Military Council Decides To Reduce Land Forces Of Empire

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Jan. 18.—A supreme military council has more than once been held of late with the object of devising means for the restriction of the land forces of Japan. After full deliberation a decision has been reached on general principles, which is now being looked into by the Bureau of Military Affairs, and a concrete plan of which is expected to be completed in February.

According to the new plan, it appears the number of military divisions will be left as at present, only reducing soldiers by some 50,000 in ordinary times. To this end, the organisation of a batallion, which now consists of four companies, will be changed so as to comprise only three companies. Further, the present quota of six machine-guns to a regiment is to be doubled. It is also understood that an improvement is to be affected upon special arms. The sum to be saved by the reduction of soldiers will, it is said, be applied to the expenses involved by the new weapons.

The Cabinet Council ratified the decision taken yesterday to entrust the portfolio of the Ministry of Colonies to M. Dior, the Minister of Commerce, pending the return of M. Sarraut from Washington.

M. Manoury, Minister of the Interior, submitted for signature a decree renewing for a period of six months the temporary mission of the Governor of Algeria.

M. Le Trocquer, Minister of Public Works, informed the Cabinet that an agreement had been reached between the owners and the coal miners in the Nord department and the Pas de Calais in regard to the reduction of salaries.

CONFERENCE TOLD OF JAP PLANS TO RULE SIBERIANS

Far Eastern Committee Gets Detailed Program Of Domination

(Dalta News Agency)

Dairen, Jan. 14. The Tokio Asahi has published the following memorandum handed to the Far Eastern Committee of the Washington Conference by a Russian organisation in America, which organisation, according to the paper, can under no circumstances be considered as a sympathiser with the "Bolshevik Government."

The memorandum deals with the activities of the Japanese in Siberia and the Sakhalin Island and is to the following effect:

1. The Japanese authorities have declared that they refuse to recognise any Russian administration in the occupied territory. The Japanese authorities have appointed special officers instructed to conduct all work and supervise the military, civil, judiciary and even legal affairs in the occupied districts.

2. The local Russian autonomous government establishments have been dissolved and substituted by councils of elders of the villages or councils of advisers among whom are members appointed directly by the Japanese military command.

3. The Japanese military authorities have published a decree permitting access of outsiders to the occupied districts, "outsiders" meaning Russians.

4. The cities, towns and villages have been given Japanese names.

5. Special instructions have been issued for the Russians who wish to enter into trade relations with the representatives of the Japanese military command. In such cases the Russians must apply to the Japanese command, accompanied by their interpreters capable of conducting the business in the Japanese language.

6. The Japanese jurisdiction and Japanese courts of justice have been established in the occupied districts.

7. The sale and lease of land are forbidden unless with the sanction of the Japanese authorities concerned.

When, through the trickery of Prince Zaccaria, one of her suitors, this child supposedly falls into a well where a lion is confined, the grief-stricken mother, vowing under the shadow of the Cross to marry the man who saves her child, she renounces her vow when a simple huntsman of Plebian birth rescues and returns the boy to his mother, trouble ensues. How this Huntsman finally wins her love and she comes to the full realisation of her love for him and publicly exposes him, is told in a series of highly dramatic situations filled with thrills.

Official Report Issued On Small-Pox Epidemic

Health Depar ment Records Show That In Month Of December 184 Died From Disease

Small-pox claimed 184 victims in the International Settlement of Shanghai in the month of December, 161 Chinese, 15 resident foreigners and 8 non-resident foreigners, according to the report of the Health Department which is published in the current issue of the Municipal Gazette. This was the period in which the epidemic reached its most serious phase and at the same time influenza, but not of a fatal type, also appeared to a considerable extent.

Investigations made by Health Inspectors in connection with small-pox cases that resulted fatally are of particular interest as they show clearly the importance of vaccination.

RESULTS GIVEN

The following results were obtained in these investigations:

Asiatics 7. Unvaccinated 2. No information 5.

American 5. Unvaccinated 3. Unvaccinated for 40 years 1. Doubtful 1.

British 1. No information.

Russian 1. Unvaccinated.

Portuguese 1. Doubtful vaccination 2 years previously.

Of 48 other cases investigated: Unvaccinated—21. Unvaccinated since infancy—8. Unvaccinated during the last 3 years—8. Doubtful vaccination during the last 3 years—7. No information —4.

Concerning the prevention of the disease there is nothing to add to what was said in the report of last month and in previous reports. Vaccination and re-vaccination duly and efficiently performed are the primary essential methods of prevention of small-pox. On account of the prevalence of infection in China, vaccination should be repeated every 3 years.

THOUSANDS VACCINATED

The campaign of vaccination has been carried on with intense vigour. 12,000 free vaccinations have been done at the Branch Health Offices and other places—a record in the history of the preventive work of the Health Department.

In the past week the report shows that eight new cases of small-pox among the foreign residents were reported and in this period 39 Chinese died from the disease.

INFLUENZA WARNINGS

On the subject of the outbreak of influenza, a warning is given in the report as follows:

The germ of influenza has a high natural infectivity, so that exposures and contacts, inevitable and close, under conditions of city life, make it impossible for the majority to escape. The intensest hot-beds of infection are crowded and ill-ventilated public buildings and conveyances. There is not any great city that can boast of worse-ventilated public buildings than Shanghai. The air in them is usually stale and stagnant; too hot or too cold, too moist or too dry according to the season: and where a crowd assembles, and coughing and sneezing occur, it rapidly becomes laden with massed infection.

The essential of good ventilation is a constant supply of clean, moving air of proper temperature and humidity. This can be obtained by mechanical systems which propel washed, warmed or cooled air into the building and extract from it the air which is used and vitiated. Thus infection is diluted and rapidly carried away, and other evils of bad ventilation are avoided. It should be compulsory for all public buildings to be equipped with some such system.

The prevention of influenza lies in the avoidance of crowds, the shielding of the throat and nose when coughing or sneezing, and the hygiene of the throat and nose. When infection is contracted patients should remain in bed, at least during the febrile stage, for their own sakes, to avoid dangerous complications, as pneumonia, and for the protection of others.

SWEDE REVIVES LATE CZAR TALE

Fate Of Family Is Very Uncertain, He Says In Finnish Paper

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The assassination of the female members of the family of the late Czar Nicholas of Russia when they were prisoners in Ykaterinburg is very uncertain, asserts a Finnish newspaper. A Swede who lived in the vicinity of the house in Ykaterinburg, where the Russian imperial family was domiciled, is the author of the article, which deals with the murder of the Czar and the subsequent investigation. He declares that the commission which Admiral Kolchak charged with the investigation did not find any human remains in the ashes which were discovered on the spot where the corpses were alleged to have been burned after the murder.

He records a general rumor among the population of Ykaterinburg that the Czarevitch was not murdered, but died as the result of a shock which she received when a large shell burst suddenly in the immediate neighborhood of the imperial family's abode.

Had the entire family been murdered, the writer holds, the rifle volleys would have been audible. However, he and his friends, who heard every shot fired in the house occupied by the Czar and his family on the tragic night, heard only a few shots. He admits the possibility that the women were murdered the same night, but emphasizes that in the investigation subsequently held not even a chemical analysis of the ashes furnished proof of this.

"The precise details of the fate of the Czar and his family will be shown publicly," he says, "only when those who possess inside knowledge of the case will incur no great danger in telling what they know."

British Shippers Form Organisation

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 17.—As outcome of the formation of the committee under the chairmanship of Sir Stephen Demetriadi, established in 1920, to discuss the conditions which certain shipowners endeavored to impose regarding India and homeward bills of lading, a Federation of British Traders' Association was formed today, comprising prominent members of oil-seed, cotton, tea, jute, and shellac associations.

The inaugural meeting passed a resolution urging legislation on the lines of the Imperial Shipping Committee's report, declined to accept the Hague rules regarding bills of lading and offered to meet the shipowners to discuss a definitive form of a bill of lading acceptable to both sides.

Commissioner Haynes Cites Figures To Prove Contention

(China Press Service)

Washington, Jan. 17.—On the eve of the second anniversary of nation-wide prohibition Commissioner Haynes announced that facts and figures which he said clearly proved the benefits to be derived from prohibition.

Increased savings accounts in banks all over the country, a record Christmas business, the closing of drink-cure establishments, and reduced number of arrests for drunkenness were among the benefits claimed by Mr. Haynes. The price of bonded liquor had been reduced sixty percent during the last two years, Mr. Haynes said.

He also announced that there had been 30,000 indictments for violations of the liquor laws, and that 22,000 had been convicted.

COUNT'S PHOTO IN PATERNITY CASE EXCITES PARIS

Counsel For Son Of Servant Girls Springs Surprise At Trial

EXPERTS HELP CLAIM

Signature On Picture Declared To Be That Of Demay, Property Owner

Paris, Dec. 17.—A photograph which experts decided was signed by the late Count Francois Demay, one of the richest property owners on the Riviera, was the most sensational evidence recently in a paternity case which is absorbing the keenest interest of French society, Count Demay's title running back seven centuries, while the Countess was prominent in all French charities.

The plaintiff is known as Francois Beltrandi, and was born in Nice in November, 1897, while his mother was a servant in the Count's employ.

According to Beltrandi's lawyer, the Count not only admitted his paternity to members of the family, but told numerous friends how he had provided all possible luxuries for the expectant mother, even to sending large sums of money for her upkeep.

This, however, was the usual evidence in such cases under the French law which provides that illegitimate children shall share in estates, but Beltrandi's counsel caused a stir of excitement on the second day of the trial when he suddenly drew from his pocket a photograph of the dead Count which bore the dedication: "In remembrance of his papa, for our dear child," and beneath it two signatures—those of the Count and of Marie Beltrandi.

The opposing attorneys were taken aback by this unexpected revelation and asked for a brief adjournment to consider the new evidence. When they returned they pleaded that although the signature was undoubtedly that of the Count, there was no evidence to show that the signature had not been attached at a different time to that of the dedication.

Experts, however, testified that the same ink had been used, and the case closed with all prospects of Francois Beltrandi gaining an important share of the Count's property. Two later legitimate children, a daughter, Agnes, and a son, Francois, get only the income from the portion of the estate provided for minor offspring, while the share of the Countess Marie will be held in trust for Beltrandi if the court rules that the photograph is conclusive evidence of the Count's parentage.

The properties involved include several chateaus and villas between Nice and Monte Carlo, as well as vast estates in the richest agricultural districts in central France, estimated at 150,000,000 francs.

German Coal Dearth Is Menacing Industry

Berlin, Dec. 17.—Berlin's coal supply is nearly exhausted and will last only a few days, according to the Government commissariat for coal distribution. Germany has been forced to cut down considerably the quantities of coal regularly exported to Austria and Hungary.

The commissariat declared one of the principal reasons for the coal shortage was that Germany was forced to supply France with quantities which are far in excess of former coal shipments to France.

It was announced that passenger train service between Hamburg, Hanover, Frankfort, Leipsic and Dresden would be reduced owing to the coal shortage.

While increased business in the German iron industry requires an increased supply of raw iron, about twenty furnaces are inactive owing to the inability of the authorities to supply sufficient coke to run them. It was stated that about 2,000 German machine factories and steel smelting works will be forced to refuse domestic and foreign orders.

Sink Your Own Ships!

SYMBOLIC of America's lead in seeking to prevent future wars by disarmament the United States will send an embattled old sea-warrior of the battleship line out to sea under its own steam and sink it with flags flying.

Some old warship, probably the Oregon, that dauntless ship that made the famous Round-the-Horn run during the Spanish-American war, will be selected to rest its out-of-date skeleton in Davy Jones' locker until the salt and water reduce it to a pile of oozy slime.

A very pretty and picturesque ceremony, and indeed symbolic of the American attitude toward future wars on the sea. The average American, and the average citizen of most other countries, would like to see the other battleships of the world sunk in the same place and in the same way. Unfortunately, however, that cannot be. And so other battleships will not be built, and the present ships will be relegated to the scrap-pile when their days of efficient service have been passed.

A pretty ceremony! But the rest of the ships now in commission should be disposed of as junk. Henry Ford had the right idea when he offered to buy all the navies of the world and scrap them. Ford could probably secure steel for automobiles much cheaper by buying scrapped battleships at auction than he could buy it elsewhere. Unfortunately for the treasuries of the powers, however, Mr. Ford, as he told France, wants all the ships or none. He would not consider a deal for a paltry dozen battleships or cruisers. That would defeat his object, because Ford is still obsessed with the idea that he is the one man in the world who can solve the riddle of war and bring Peace on Earth for ever and ever. If he could scrap every warship sea warfare, at least, would be an impossibility for many years to come, and part of his dream would be realised.

The sinking of an American battleship will, nevertheless, be a great object lesson to the rest of the world, and it is to be hoped that Great Britain, France, Japan and some of the other nations follow America's lead and symbolise their own rejection of super-navies by sending one of their ships to the bottom of the sea.

Einstein Theory Again Is Verified

Dr. Albert Einstein's calculations as to the amount of curvature in a ray of light passing through the gravitational field of the sun, which was one of the three examples of the working of his theory of general relativity susceptible of proof, have for the second time been proved correct. The work has been done this time by Professor W. W. Campbell of the Lick Observatory, based on photographs taken by him at intervals since 1900.

The success of Professor Campbell in determining by means of photographs the exact curvature of light in passing the sun was made known by Professor Henry Norris Russell of Princeton, one of the best-known astronomers of America, in commenting on similar calculations based on Newtonian mathematics done by a German astronomer named Soldner in 1801. Soldner's work had been forgotten until recently it was discovered by German scientists, who have been using it to show the great advances made in astronomical science in the last century.

Professor Campbell's work is the more noteworthy because of the confirmation of this illustration of Einstein's theory was obtained by two expeditions sent out in 1919 by the Royal Astronomical Society to West Africa and Brazil to observe an eclipse of the sun and photograph the light of stars which passed it on the way to the earth. Professor Campbell did not need this special aid in his work, but used photographs taken by him during other eclipses. His results would probably have been published before those of the British society had it not been for the war, which took from him his assistants.

This confirmation of the correctness of Einstein's calculations in this particular field is made doubly strong by the fact that it is based on observations extending over a number of years, instead of on one eclipse as in the case of the 1919 expeditions. The difference in the application of the Einstein theory and the Newtonian theory of gravitation is so small that Einstein has pointed out that there are only three cases in which such differences can be observed.

One is bending of the light waves in a gravitational field, another is the distortion of the oval orbits of planets around the sun—which was confirmed in the case of Mercury, whose irregularities have puzzled astronomers for years and third, the shifting of the special lines toward the red end of the spectrum in the case of light waves coming from stars of appreciable mass. This last case has not yet been proved, although it has been said astronomers have apparently arrived at results which indicate that Einstein's theory is upheld by this phenomenon.

Such slight differences between the Einstein and Newtonian theory in its practical application, despite the vast difference in basic principle, have led some astronomers to claim that all the effects explained by Einstein can be explained equally as well by the application of Newtonian mathematics. It is true that they can, although the Newtonian calculations give only half the curvature of a ray of light determined by Einstein's calculations.

The maintenance of their viewpoint, however, is what gives interest to the discovery of the work of Soldner, the German astronomer of Munich, whose speculations in this field have been found in Bode's Astronomical Year Book for 1804. His paper was called "Over the deflection of a ray of light from its direct movement through the attraction of a terrestial body which it passes close at hand." His apparent anticipation of Einstein has brought many statements from German scientists as to the reasons for his work being forgotten.

"In the first place," writes Professor Laune of Berlin in the Frankfurter Zeitung, "120 years ago nobody could hope to have measured a curvature of light of a second arc from a star, especially when it is in the neighborhood of the sun. Soldner himself says that it is entirely impossible, and even in 1919 it was hard enough despite the great advances which the astronomy of measurement had made in the meantime, for example, through the introduction of photography. The general belief in natural science is that discoveries do not attract attention unless one can hope to verify them.

DISPROVE SOLDNER

"The other and more important reason lies in the nature of Soldner's calculation, based on the corpuscular theory of light, which was, as we know, disproved completely in the first decade of the last century as a result of the discovery of the wave theory of light. Thus the ground was cut from under his hypothesis. Also the researches of Maxwell and Hertz proved that light waves were electrical phenomena. Hence there arose recently the greatest astonishment when Einstein declared that through the electrical nature of light and from the general theory of relativity light did bend and could be observed. That was, however, quite another thing from the declaration of Soldner.

"That Soldner's idea had not been thought of by some one before him we may doubt. They were not far away, and if these others did not publish this theory they probably argued—and, from their standpoint, correctly—that it promised no advance to science."

Dr. Hilbert and Dr. Born of Goettingen point out that Soldner's formula of 1801 corresponds with the one which Einstein published in 1911 as the result of his study of the influence of gravity on light, but that that work of Einstein did not contain those fundamentals of physics now described as the general theory of relativity.

"The real foundation for the general relativity theory was discovered for the first time by Einstein at the end of 1915," they say. "So it happened that the value of the curvature estimated by Einstein in 1911 and which corresponds with the calculation of Soldner are from the standpoint of relativity entirely false. The real curvature is double the amount found by Einstein in 1911. That Einstein in his researches into the laws of gravity should have come upon the false value is easily understandable. Genius looks a long time before a thought is taken in in all its details and is formulated. The final value of the curvature of light follows naturally out of the general relativity theory. It is a mistake to believe that Soldner had correctly foreseen the relativity theory."

SOLDNER NOT FIRST IN FIELD

As a matter of fact, Soldner was not the first to speculate, at least, upon the curvature of light in a gravitational field. Prof. Russell of Princeton points out that such would be a natural conclusion of Newton's work, which Newton himself probably reached at some stage in his calculations. Inasmuch as Newton believed in the corpuscular theory of light, it would seem obvious to him that such corpuscles would be affected by a gravitational field.

Prof. A. S. Eddington, in an article on Einstein, said:

"Were Newton alive he would be congratulating himself on his foresight. In his 'Opticks' we read: Query 1—Do not bodies act upon light at a distance and by their action bend its rays, and is not this action strongest at the least distance? This confirmation of Newton's speculation is in itself a striking result; it might perhaps be described as the first new thing that has been learned about gravitation in more than 200 years."

So the German, Soldner, who published his theory at the age of 25, was merely following a speculation of the great Newton, and anticipating the 1911 work of Einstein, which Einstein later discarded after the discovery of his theory of relativity.

The Mystery Of Kitchener's Death

The tragic death of Lord Kitchener has led to an extraordinary number of legends, suggesting that his death was due either to treachery or the German spy system. Recently a film has been shown widely throughout England, in which Lord Kitchener is the central figure and is represented as having lost his life through the incautious revelation of his intended movements by a British officer to a woman who turned out afterwards to be a German spy. The exhibition of the film has evoked many emphatic protests, and at the end of November the War Office considered it necessary to issue a statement categorically denying that there was any foundation whatever for the legend. The statement issued by the War Office on November 29 was as follows:

"Various statements have been made in newspapers, periodicals, and at public meetings to the effect that the War Office is in possession of evidence indicating that the sinking of H.M.S. Hampshire, with Lord Kitchener on board, on June 5, 1916, was due either wholly or in part to information supplied to the German Government through the instrumentality of a female German spy named Elbie Boecker, resident in London at the time of the disaster.

"It has been alleged with some detail that this spy obtained her information regarding the forthcoming departure of Lord Kitchener from a British officer, that on obtaining this information she transmitted it to Germany, and that for her services she received the sum of 10,000 marks from the German Government.

"The War Office is not in possession of any such evidence, nor indeed of any evidence whatever indicating that the sinking of the Hampshire was due to information supplied to the German Government either by the woman Boecker or by any other person.

"They have, however, received from time to time reports to the effect that this woman, who is described as 'irresponsible and harmless,' has herself boasted in Berlin to anyone who is willing to listen to her that she received 10,000 marks from the German Government after having informed them in advance of Lord Kitchener's impending departure for Russia, and that she obtained the information while resident in London from a British officer friend of her husband's with whom she was dining shortly before Lord Kitchener's departure.

"No corroboration whatsoever of any of her statements has at any time been obtained, but, on the contrary, it may be definitely asserted that her story that she was the means of bringing about the death of Lord Kitchener is wholly untrue.

"Elbie Boecker was, in fact, sentenced at the Marylebone Police Court on May 8 (no less than four weeks before the Hampshire sailed for Russia and long before any arrangements had been made for Lord Kitchener's journey) to two months' imprisonment and expulsion for having travelled beyond the five-mile limit imposed on the movements of alien enemies. She left the country on an expulsion order on June 29, 1916.

"The fact that she was never at large in England after May 8, 1916, effectually disposes of her claims, and statements to the effect that she was arrested on suspicion after the sinking of the vessel and deported on account of her suspected share in the disaster are therefore obviously contrary to the fact."

Yankee In Siberia

American Hunter Brings New Specimens—Complains Of Japanese Interference

Trading a cut of tobacco for the skin of a white fox is among the sports of inhabitants along Chukotsk Peninsula, northeastern Siberia, according to Mr. John B. Burnham, President of the American Game Protective Association, who has recently returned from a three-months' hunt through that section of Russia for a supposedly extinct variety of mountain sheep. Mr. Burnham does not claim the distinction of bringing back any white fox skins, but he has brought back several hitherto unknown specimens of mountain sheep, the exact technical names of which are now being determined at the Smithsonian Institution. The country is said to be a jungle of low mountain ranges, entirely without vegetation, except a heavy moss in the valleys upon which huge droves of reindeer feed. The natives—slanteyed, yellow-skinned Mongols called "chukchis"—live on fish, game and reindeer meat. As meal can only be obtained at a few isolated trading posts bread is practically unknown. Though northeastern Siberia is a Russian possession there are few Russians to be found there.

"Adventurers and traders from all over the world," said Mr. Burnham, "were to be found in this frozen land. I talked with a Kurd from the Caspian Sea, a Russian who had lost everything in Moscow, an Armenian, prospectors and Bolsheviki. All of them, however, were near the coast. There were no evidences a hundred miles inland that a white man had ever before been there. The four-stone square—sure sign of a white man's tent—was not found anywhere through that land."

Sailing from Nome, Alaska, on the U. S. revenue cutter Bear, the party reached Emma Harbor, on the Siberian coast, the Fourth of July. Because the Captain of the ship would not hoist a red flag along with the allied colors the Bolshevist agents guarding the coast would not allow the ship to make a landing. Mr. Burnham and his companion were taken back a short distance to St. Lawrence Island, where they procured a small vessel with an Esthonian pilot and were later able to find an isolated bay and unload their provisions.

"There is no attempt at agriculture on this peninsula even during the Summer season, continued Mr. Burham, "as the ice never entirely melts out of creeks and lakes. The natives live very much like the Eskimos, wrapped in furs during the Winter, fishing, trapping and trading with the crews of the few boats that are able to make a landing anywhere along the coast. The wealth of the country lies in its mines, fisheries and furs. White fox, polar bear and seal are plentiful. I was told that there was a billion dollars' worth of trade at the present time between Nome, Alaska, and the Siberian Coast. It is only about eight hours' sail from coast to coast at the nearest point.

"During the Summer season each day has twenty-four hours sunlight, but before we left in September the days were very short. The children are so hardy that during the warm Summer days, when the European is shivering around in his furs, they are bounding about half-naked like young savages apparently immune to the icy winds that blow continually off the Arctic Ocean. These high winds make it difficult to fasten a tent securely, in fact, it is necessary to weight it heavily with from 1,000 to 5,000 pounds.

"Nearly the whole island is volcanic, but there are no evidences of recent eruptions. Hot springs bubbling out of the ground further inland temper the air within their radius. The ptarmigan (northern grouse), wild deer, bear and mountain sheep are found all through the mountains. The sheep differ from the black ones of British Columbia and the white ones found in Alaska. They are mouse colored, smaller and both the ewes and the rams have horns. Their flesh is delicate and is delicious to eat. There were no bison, and I was told that they have been practically cleaned out of Russia. In fact, since the revolution much of the game has been killed for food. The 10,000 bison in America are probably the largest herd in the world.

"By a summons purporting to be of an important nature I was decoyed thirty miles to the coast from the mountains where I was hunting, and then virtually court-martialed on a Japanese ship, the Daiichi Toro Maru. The Japanese said they thought I was prospecting for gold, and that as they had the mining rights to the Chukotsk Peninsula they questioned my right to roam about the peninsula. I later learned that they had made a very important gold discovery on the Asun River, east of Cape Aggen, or Achchen, as it is printed on the American charts. No one apparently would believe that an American sportsman would travel so far and to such a sterile and inhospitable country merely for the pleasure of hunting. It was generally thought that I must have an ulterior motive.

"The Toro Maru was followed by the Odoro Maru, which ship officially represented the Japanese Government, as the crew were in uniform. The Odoro Maru carried a complete scientific staff, including fishery experts, geologists, surveyors and botanists. They were studying every possible utilisation of the resources of the country. While at Emma Harbor they made a complete topographic survey of the bay, showing the soundings and shoreline; everything needed for the commercial navigator. As I naturally felt that I had as much right to be in the country as the Japanese I resented their peremptory summons.

"Emma Harbor is the best harbor on the Asiatic Coast north of Petropavlovsk. It is large enough to float the navies of the world and well protected. A thirty-knot cruiser can reach Nome from this base in eight hours. It got its name from the American whalers, probably back in 1850, when many of them sailed from New Bedford and other New England ports to northern waters. It is less than 500 miles north of the great circle route from Japan to the United States. The Japanese have virtually taken possession of the only other fine harbor on this route. This is Avacha Bay, on which Petropavlovsk, the capital of Kamchatka, is situated.

"The rivers and streams abound in cod, halibut and salmon. Certain salt water fishery rights along the Siberian coast were granted under the Portsmouth Treaty. But today the rivers are being invaded and huge quantities of salmon taken therefrom, contrary to treaty rights. I was told on good authority that 150,000 cases of salmon were taken from the Kamchatka River last Summer. There is a fortune in the rivers of northeastern Siberia. And from the stories of prospectors who have "panned" many of the creeks there is gold enough for many fortunes hidden away in the sand.

"The only luxuries the natives know are papouska (Russian tobacco), tea, sugar and 'hooch.' They will barter their finest and richest furs for sugar with which to make hooch.

"In the coming conference of the powers over the question of disarmament I trust the United States will secure from Japan a thorough understanding on the Emma Harbor question and their designs in Northeastern Siberia.

"Emma Harbor is less than 500 miles north of the great circle route from Japan to the United States.

"As long ago as the Summer of 1920 Japanese warships at anchor in this harbor held up the captain of the merchant ship Omsk, which at that time was subsidised by the Far East Siberian Republic to carry mails from Vladivostok north, and would not permit her to land at her own dock, in her own country, until she had obtained official permission from the Japanese Naval Commander.

"The Portsmouth Treaty, after the Russo-Japanese war, gave the Japanese certain salt water fisheries rights along the Siberian coast. Today the treaty is absolutely disregarded, as the Japanese have invaded the rivers and are taking immense quantities of salmon contrary to treaty specifications.

"Despite the talk in Washington on the part of the Japanese representatives, I am satisfied that their attitude in Siberia is not only dangerous to our country from the trade standpoint, but also from the military standpoint. Emma Harbor could be fortified to make it practically impregnable. Fort Davis at Nome has been abandoned. There is only one company of soldiers at Fort St. Michaels, near the mouth of the Yukon River, and no other military posts on our coast north of the Aleutian Islands. In case of a sudden declaration of war Japan would have Alaska at her mercy.

"I have just noticed that Alfred Denbigh of Vladivostok, is on his way to Washington to report the manner in which Japan is pilfering Russia's valuable Kamchatka fishing grounds. He says that the Japanese have made demands on the Vladivostok Government which that Government cannot concede, both with regard to fisheries and trading. It seems to me of the greatest importance that the disarmament conference should be fully acquainted with the situation along the coast of Northeastern Siberia. It is only fair to our good citizens who are valiantly working to make Alaska an American State that their interest be understood and safeguarded by Washington."

The Population Factor In The Pacific

A study of the problem of world population surpassing in its thoroughness every previous attempt of this kind is advocated by Dr. W. E. Ritter, director of the Scripps Institution for Biological Research, La Jolla, Cal., in a statement made public in New York recently by the Engineering Foundation, which, with the National Research Council, is conducting a nation-wide movement to foster research in science and industry. "Will the Washington conference prepare for a next step which is vital to the solution of the problem of the Pacific? That is a burning question," says the statement.

"What is that step?" it continues. "To initiate such a thoroughgoing study of the problem of world population as has never yet been attempted. There are about 1,750,000,000 people on the earth, authorities tell us. Inspection discovers that about 922,000,000, or 54 percent of these live in the Indo-Pacific area on about 25 percent of the earth's land; while the remaining 46 percent live in the Atlantic area on about 75 percent of the land. Of the 932,000,000 Indo-Pacific population, about 850,000,000, or 50 percent of the total world population, are confined to the eastern and southern portions of the Asiatic continent, on about 12 percent of the earth's land.

"But these familiar facts are far from the whole story, because they are only quantitative. They tell nothing on the qualitative side of the problem. Nearly all these Asiatics belong to a culture that is pre-eminently agricultural. They are anchored to the soil by chains of necessity, custom, tradition and religion older and stronger than any known to the foremost peoples of the Atlantic area.

"From the density of these Asiatic populations, from the type of their culture, and from the higher standards of living and the facility of communication and travel in the whole modern world, the tendency of these peoples to overflow into all meagerly populated and cultivated lands of the Indo-Pacific area which are similar to those they have been accustomed to for a score of centuries is bound to be tremendous.

"Couple these facts with the further fact that all civilised peoples now have positive knowledge that there are no more vacant or heathen lands into which they can migrate, and with the still further fact that both the Orientals and the Occidentals primarily concerned are highly but differently civilised, and the momentous truth gradually takes shape in our minds that the instinct of self-preservation is here developing a problem some elements of which have never before confronted mankind.

"Whatever else, therefore, comes from the Washington conference, if there does not come the beginning of a comprehensive study of the population problem, not much will have been done toward solving the Pacific question. All this implies a carefully laid out plan of study with facilities and time for carrying it out."

When Light Is Not Light

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Eminent Astronomer And Authority On Subjects Of Scientific Interest.

One of my correspondents is greatly puzzled by the difference in the appearance of the sky at night from its appearance by day, for, he says, the sun's rays are all around us in space, except in the shadow straight behind the little earth, and when we see the moon at night, 240,000 miles off to one side of the earth, why should it appear surrounded by dark sky when not only it, but the space around it, is bathed in full sunshine? This is a question I have heard before, and not a few seem to find it perplexing.

The explanation, in a sentence is that there is no general illumination of the sky outside the earth's atmosphere, because there is nothing outside the atmosphere to reflect and diffuse the sun's and so send them to our 'eyes. A ray viewed sideways, so to speak, makes no impression of light, for to produce such impression the ray must enter the eye in the direction of its propagation. Accordingly, the sun's rays which pass the earth on all sides and permeate all surrounding space, except just behind the earth, make no impression upon our sense of sight except when they fall upon an opaque body, like the moon, and are reflected from its surface straight to our eyes on the earth.

The atmosphere itself, with the particles of dust, moisture, etc., that cloud it, reflects the rays and thus produces the appearance of a light blue luminous sky by day, but on the night side of the earth, which is turned away from the sun, the atmosphere is not traversed by the sun's rays, and accordingly the sky appears dark. If the atmosphere extended several thousand miles above the earth on all sides the night sky would be illuminated and the long conical shadow of the earth, projecting away from the direction of the sun, would probably be visible at midnight as a circular patch of darkness in the sky, the diameter of which would depend upon the distance to which the atmosphere extended.

But, in fact, the atmosphere has an effective height of only forty or fifty miles, beyond which it is too rare to reflect or diffuse the rays. This height is so slight compared with the diameter of the earth that only for a short time after sunset is any light sent down to us from illuminated air. What we do thus get causes twilight.

If we go to the opposite extreme and suppose the earth to have no atmosphere at all, then there would be no difference in the general appearance or illumination of the sky by day or by night. By day the sun would be visible and at night it would be hidden behind the earth, but by day as well as by night the stars would be plainly visible. This is no doubt the state of affairs on the moon, where we can detect no evidence of the existence of an atmosphere capable of reflecting and diffusing the sunlight. There is, therefore, no blue sky visible from the moon, and no general sky illumination capable of blinding the eyes to the stars.

In such a world one would be able to see the stars almost up to the edge of the sun's disk. This would be an enormous advantage for astronomers. If the earth had no atmosphere, and we could yet live upon it, we should not have to wait for the rare occurrence of a total eclipse of the sun in order to test the correctness of Einstein's theory that the rays of a star coming close to the edge of the sun on their way to us are deflected a certain amount by the sun's gravitational field. The test could be made any day, and under the very best of circumstances.

The blueness of the day sky is an effect of the scattering of the waves of radiation by the atmospheric particles, and the color depends upon the fineness of the particles. In ordinary reflection the reflecting surfaces are large compared with the dimensions of the waves and no selective action occurs, all kinds of waves being reflected and scattered together. But when the reflecting surfaces are so small as to be comparable in size with the waves, the short blue waves are ordinarily the ones that are scattered, and this is evidently what occurs in the atmosphere.

Tyndall, Rayleigh, Wood and others have experimented with the scattering properties of clouds of particles of varying degrees of fineness, and it is found that if the particles are sufficiently minute the scattering affects waves still smaller than the blue, and a rich violet color is produced. The intensity of the blue color of the sky varies with elevation, the color being very deep on high mountain summits, and there is also some variation with meteorological conditions, but upon the whole "sky blue" is fairly uniform on all the continents, showing that the atmospheric particles which are active in producing the color do not vary much in size. If they were finer we should have a brilliant violet dome overhead by day instead of a blue one.

Tested Fish Recipes

BY MARY LEE SWANN

The Well-Known Writer and Lecturer on Cooking

SAUTED FISH

Clean and dry the fish (whole fish or fillets may be used, but fish steaks are preferable). Season the fish well and dip in flour or cornmeal or fine bread or cracker crumbs. Then fry in just enough fat to barely cover the bottom of the pan. Brown on both sides.

FISH CAKES

Press the pulp of 3 or 4 baked potatoes through the potato ricer and add 1¼ cups flaked cooked fish, 1 well-beaten egg, ¼ cup stiffly beaten cream, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Beat thoroughly. Have ready a pot of deep fat and place the frying basket containing 5 or 6 balls in the hot fat for a minute or two. Just as soon as it is delicately browned drain on unglazed paper.

CREAMED FISH

Melt ¼ cup butter, add ¼ cup sifted flour, 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of paprika and a few grains cayenne. Stir until well blended and add 2 cups milk, stirring constantly. Add 2 cups of any desired fish which has been cooked and freed from skin and bone. Serve on toasted biscuits bread, in timbale cases or in a border of potato balls or Duches potatoes. Garnish, if desired, with finely shredded peppers, chopped parsley or pickles or crisp spriga of watercress.

BAKED STUFFED SMELTS

Remove the heads, tails and fins from 1 dozen choice smelts. Clean and dry thoroughly. Dredge with salt, paprika and flour and stuff with a dressing made as follows: Mix ½ teaspoon finely minced onion, 2 tablespoons finely chopped mushrooms, ¼ cup bread crumbs, a bit of finely chopped parsley, ¼ cup melted butter and hot milk to moisten. Place the stuffed fish on a well-greased platter, sprinkle with 2 tablespoons lemon juice and cover. Bake about 10 minutes in a hot oven. Remove cover, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown. Serve with mousseline sauce made as follows: Wash and cream 4 tablespoons butter and add gradually, while beating constantly, 3 egg yolks. And ¼ cup thick cream, a dash of paprika, ¼ teaspoon salt and a dash of white pepper. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Then beat in 2½ tablespoons lemon juice and 4 tablespoons butter, bit by bit. Use a Dover egg-beater or a whisk for beating. Serve without reheating.

GERMANS FIGHT DUTCH BECAUSE OF HIGH PRICES

Hollanders Buy Out Shops In Border Villages And Raise Costs

STREET RIOTS RESULT

Berlin Resents Foreigners Purchasing Precious Objects To Resell Abroad

Berlin, Dec. 17.—Christmas presents were the reason for bloody street fighting by infuriated mobs on the German-Dutch frontier. This latest oddity of postwar conditions and mentality grows out of the anger of German inhabitants in villages along the frontier with Holland because Dutchmen are anxious to buy Christmas presents as cheaply as possible and are swarming across the border into Germany and are buying out all the shopkeepers and at the same time driving prices upward.

At last German villages decided to offer armed resistance and attacked the Dutch buyers. A hand to hand street fight was reported from the village of Kobscheid, where hundreds of persons were roughly handled.

At Kercraden a similar batle lasted several hours, both the police and non-participating city dwellers being unable to stop it. The law, of course, does not permit the removal of unwanted foreign shoppers by means of the knife and revolver.

ANGRY AT FOREIGNERS

Nevertheless, if anger could kill, half of Berlin's visitors would be dead owing to the feelings of the German population here. Last week furnished the occasion for vernacular newspapers here to attack foreign speculators. These newspapers point out the difficult position of the Berliner, who is hardly able to buy any Christmas presents owing to the fact that the price of almost everything has been driven up by foreigners. This campaign is directed against private persons who come here from abroad to buy up the few precious objects left in Germany for a few marks and then resell them abroad for huge sums.

The Vossische Zeitung reports an auction sale of art objects where an Englishman's chauffeur outbid the directors of a German museum. After one of the directors, in trying to obtain an Italian painting for his museum, offered 55,000 marks for it, the chauffeur offered 75,000. Nobody present was able to outbid the chauffeur, and he obtained the picture. Asked by persons present who he was buying for, the chauffeur explained that he had orders from his master to buy several paintings, and that his instructions were to bid up to £100 for each of them." His master takes the pictures to London and resells them for from £1,000 to £2,000 each.

A great number of similar deals by German and foreign speculators are reported. A woman "money rate" shark bought a fine fur coat in Berlin for 100,000 marks, equivalent to 8,000 French francs, and resold the coat to a Paris furrier for 32,000 francs, thus making a handsome profit, while the furrier in question sold it for 60,000 francs. The same person often repeats similar maneuvers several times.

A similar "traffic" exists between Sweden, Holland and Germany. Berlin jewelers, however, sell much more to Berliners than to foreigners. This is explained than to foreigners. This is explained by the general German desire to invest savings in objects of lasting value rather than run the risk of change in the actual value of wealth according to the rise and fall in the exchange rate on the mark.

XMAS BUYING EARLY

Many persons here buy Christmas gifts long before they are wanted in order to avoid a rise in prices due to the possible further fall in the value of the mark. While a diadem was formerly the privilege of women belonging to the "upper ten," many a guest at Berlin society parties now wears a blazing diamond crown. This quaint economic situation is often accounted for by the fact that such a woman often wears her whole fortune and all her savings on her head.

Numerous Russian fugitives who settled in Berlin live entirely on the proceeds of the sale of their jewels. While Berliners do not consider jewels a luxury but look upon them as an investment, the actual native Christmas shopper gets more of a "look in" at the shops stocked with cheaper goods, such as toys.

In this connection it may be said that the German toy industry put several new ideas on the market this season. The downfall of German militarism manifests itself in the toy shops, too. The tin soldier has almost entirely disappeared. Their "disarmament" led to a revival of the tin and lead red Indian.

The industrial spirit, too, has a great influence here on toys. New

BUILT FORTUNE ON LOOT OF WAR

Frenchman Admits He And Three Associates Raided Battlefields

Paris, Dec. 17.—From a poor hardware merchant to a millionaire in three years is the history of Arthur Parsy, who lives near Amiens, but youthful readers do not find the same moral inspiration in his career as they do in those of Horatio Alger's memorable characters.

Parsy is undergoing a rigid investigation by a criminal court commission at Villers Bretonneux, where the German advance was halted, as neighbors have decided that it is uncanny for one man to lay up so much of worldly goods in so short a time. The first results were obtained recently when Parsy, naming three associates, admitted that their wealth had been obtained from scrap and other material gathered from French and British battlefields. In most cases, however, the material was in first class condition and had merely been stored to await a favorable moment for transportation by the British Government, but Parsy acted quicker. With a long line of motor lorries he visited the Roisel area at midnight and loaded them with more than a hundred tons of iron bars, which he sold at the highest market price.

Other supply dumps likewise are known to have been ravaged, the thefts including more than 100,000 francs worth of cement, lumber and roof materials intended as British donations for the residents returning to the devastated regions.

From the funds obtained by these midnight raids Parsy already had constructed fifteen cottages, which probably will be confiscated by the Government when all the evidence is in, and Parsy is given his sentence. Parsy made one grandstand play to ward off the impending punishment. When a friend in the Government office at Amiens told him that the court had commenced an investigation Parsy visited the Ministry of the Liberated Regions and admitted that he had taken some valuable material without proper authority while scavengering for iron in the ruined regions. His offer to pay for the material he admitted he had stolen was promptly accepted and Parsy flourished his receipt among his friends as evidence that he was an honest worker. But the investigators found that operations on a much larger scale had not been reported and insisted that Parsy's funds and personal papers be put under seal.

Swindlers At Reval Posing As Officials

Reval, Dec. 17.—The post-bellum swindler is nearly as clever and enterprising in the Baltic States as he is in England and America. One gentleman in the Reval post office who was wanted for opening registered letters and appropriating the contents suddenly disappeared and now after the lapse of a year he is found to have been representing himself for the last twelve months as a member of the secret police. In that capacity he has been searching houses, nominally for Bolshevist literature, but really for any jewelry and other valuables that he could lay his hands on. Judging by his style of life he was able to lay his hands on a good deal.

Another case was that of a clever gang of thieves among the police themselves who had been plundering Red Cross stores. While an inquiry was being held by the chief of police into their delinquencies they broke into the chief's own house and stripped it of everything.

specialities are big metal building cases, enabling boys to build cranes, boring machines, bridges and even locomotives, tram cars and airplanes. The models can be made to move by connecting them through a simple device with any electric light contact in a room.

Certain toys are very expensive. Thus the best quality of a perambulator for dolls is almost equal in price to a regular perambulator for a child.

The economic situation in Germany has killed one of the poetical Christmas illusions of romance found so frequently in sentimental novels—how a mother pawns her linen in order to buy Christmas dolls for her daughter. Statistics show that the pawnshops are surrendering pledges left with them by many persons, and that more articles are being redeemed than pledged. Owing to the advance in wages due to the fall in the value of the mark it is comparatively easy for a workman now to redeem an object which he pawned several months ago for, say, 100 marks.

However, Christmas conditions here in 1921 make an observer think that the Christmas angel ought to study economics.

RAISING FUND TO HELP AMERICANS BROKE IN PARIS

U. S. Banker In France Starts Movement With A Gift Of $5,000

WORTHY MEN DESTITUTE

Besides, Capital City Suffers From A. E. F. Deserters Now Panhandlers

Paris, December.—This year no honest American in Paris need be down and out. Officially there is none worth speaking about. That is because the destitute are independent and do not apply for aid except as a last resort. Until now there has been no official help for them, as American officials did not furnish funds to help their needy countrymen as other nations are doing, notably Great Britain, which pays the passage home of a subject in cases of genuine hardship.

A committee of the United American Charity met recently to plan the pooling of existing funds so that destitute persons who apply to an American resident or to the consulate will get help after their cases have been investigated.

The movement was started by an American banker living in Paris, who said that he had "grown tired of feeling mean over not assisting applicants even when convinced that they were not worthy."

The suggestion was backed by Rector Goodrich of the American Church and A. M. Thackara, American Consul-General in Paris. They purpose to carry on the work along informal lines at the lowest cost. An office has been lent by an American business man, who also pays the salary of an investigator so that none of the gifts shall be wasted.

The originator of the scheme has given $5,000, and it is hoped that a large percentage of the 25,000 American residents and transients will give $100 each to put the fund firmly on its legs.

Whether the new movement will result in the discovery of scores of American deserters who are known to be in France remains to be seen, although many of these men for a long time have been on the edge of poverty, being able to keep alive only through occasional jobs as guides through the Paris night life district or by "temporary loans" from kindly disposed Americans they meet at Paris bars.

The Y. M. C. A. headquarters there several months ago refused further assistance to these men, even cutting off meal tickets when they found ne'er-do-wells selling them to gain entrance to cafes where they are more likely to meet profitable victims. In fact the Y. M. C. A. recently obtained a list of such unworthy Americans from an ex-soldier who had turned a new leaf and decided to live decently because he did not want his fellow countrymen to return home with a bad impression of Paris according to information given to The New York Herald correspondent by a high official of the Y. M. C. A. The list shows that more than 100 of these men are acting as cocaine sellers and that many are using it themselves. In view of Prefect Leullier's new anti-vice crusade it is likely that they will end up in French jails instead of in easy berths at the expense of the new American charity organisation.

Less Latin And Greek For French Schools

Industrial Leaders Make Move For Educational Reform

Paris, Dec. 17.—Less Latin and Greek but more German, English and Spanish is the cry from some of the biggest French industrial leaders who are backing a movement for the revision of France's secondary educational system along lines closely approaching those used in American schools. Among these is Prof. Bochet, director of the French Central School of Arts and Manufactures, and whose brilliant electrical researches resulted in the utilising of Diesel motors in submarines.

Prof. Bochet in an interview recently pointed out the fact that the French educational theory does not allow for concentration toward a definite goal but consists merely of a series of scattered studies lacking in the appreciation of the wider and more human studies on which nations like Germany, the United States and Great Britain have built up their success.

Manila Visited By Disastrous Fire

(Reuter's Service)

Manila, Jan. 18.—The greatest fire in the history of the American occupation occurred yesterday in Manila, and resulted in 12,000 persons being rendered homeless and damage to the extent of nearly 1,000,000 pesos. Thirty-two blocks of houses in the native district were destroyed.

It is believed that a boy playing with matches started the blaze though the police are investigating the possibility of incendiarism.
